Governments Approve Ford/Fiat Merger—Same Colors, Names Remain

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.)—The merger between Ford New Holland and a subsidiary of Italy's Fiat Group that was announced in December has received the necessary governmental approvals, according to company spokesmen, this week. The merger will form N. H. Geotech, a $5 billion firm based in London. Geotech is owned, 80 percent by Fiat and 20 percent by Ford Motor Company, and has with the merger enveloped 25 percent of the world market in farm equipment and tractors.

New Holland Machine Works was founded by Abram Zimmerman in New Holland, Lancaster County, in 1895. The repair shop was incorporated as New Holland Machine Company in 1903. The local company made its name in hay bailers because of the invention of the automatic bale rope knotter.

Sperry Corp. acquired the New Holland company in 1947, and Ford bought Sperry's New Holland division in 1987. The new company employs over 30,000 people and is split into several divisions: Ford New Holland of America, based in New Holland; Ford New Holland Europe, based in Brussels, Belgium; Ford New Holland Brazil, based in Curitiba, Brazil; and tractor, farm and industrial divisions of FiatGeotech, based in Modena and Turin, Italy.

Fiat named Robert M. Gerrity, Ford New Holland's chief executive officer, as executive vice president of N. H. Goetech. Gerrity will relocate to Geotech's London offices and head the world-wide operations of the Ford New Holland of America unit.

Mark Branstetter, Ford New Holland, public affairs, said that from the farmer and dealer viewpoint, everything will look the same. "We are not going to change names or colors," Branstetter said. "Since agriculture is one of Fiat's three main businesses--autos, trucks and agriculture equipment--we 'Ford New Holland' mean a lot more to their company."

Branstetter said the dealer network is to remain the same and the company's goals are to continue to get high quality products to the farmers.

Senate Reconfirms Sec. Boyd Wolff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The state Senate on Wednesday reconfirmed Boyd Wolff as Pennsylvania's secretary of agriculture.

The vote by the Senate — which must approve appointments by the governor to top administrative agency positions — was unanimous.

During the past four years as state agriculture secretary, the 59-year-old Wolff (he will be 60 on May 17), has overseen an agency that has incorporated a number of new programs and the continued refurbishing of the state Farm Show complex.

Northwest Keystone Junior Beef Classic May 26

MEADVILLE (Crawford Co.) — The Northwest Keystone Junior Beef Classic will be held over Memorial Day weekend at the Crawford County Fairgrounds.

This is the seventh year for the all-breed heifer and steer show, which last year saw young cattlemen and women from four states exhibit nearly 300 head at the event.

The show is designed as a kick-off for the summer show season and gives youths, under 21 years of age, an opportunity to enter competition drawn from a larger area than usually seen at the county fairs in which they compete during the summer.

Entrants must be younger than 21 years of age and need not be a member of either 4-H or FFA. However, it is becoming a tradition for groups to come to the Classic as a club. Since the three-day Memorial Day weekend allows Monday for rest and recuperation, and since the main show schedule takes place on Sunday, young cattle enthusiasts find the event a favorite preview to the summer show season.

Smith's Guernseys: Breed Of Choice Or Heritage?

Dave stands with Lebanon Valley Star Elsie, at more than 8-years-old, she produced more than 22,000 pounds of milk and 1,150 pounds of fat in a 365-day lactation. She is one of the top cows of the Smith herd.

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

PALMYRA (Lebanon Co.) — Lebanon County has been the leader in the state for county rolling herd averages for the past two years.

It doesn't have as many herds as some counties, but for its size, it has more than most. And what's even more remarkable is that herds of most every breed of dairy cattle can be found in the county.

One might expect that the county with the highest rolling herd average would be almost completely populated with Holstein cows.

But in this limestone valley, a smaller, northern sister to the Lancaster Valley, there are strong herds of Brown Swiss, Ayrshire, Guernsey and some Jersey, in addition to the many Holstein cattle.

And, until recently, Lebanon County had also escaped the eye of real estate speculation that scourged large areas of prime agricultural land in neighboring counties.

ATTENTION TOBACCO FARMERS

PARADISE TOBACCO SALES

Did you know that Paradise Tobacco Sales currently has a ½ MILLION LBS OF TYPE 41 TOBACCO ON HAND? We have attempted to market this tobacco world-wide and have not yet been successful. WE FEEL WE OWE IT TO THE TOBACCO GROWING COMMUNITY TO INFORM THEM THAT DEMAND FOR TYPE 41 TOBACCO IS NOT HERE AND YOU SHOULD ASK YOURSELVES WHAT TYPE OF TOBACCO WILL BE MOST WANTED NEXT YEAR?

Did you know that Maryland tobacco prices were $1.90/lb. this year over auction? This is because there is currently a world shortage of Burley & Maryland type tobaccos.

GROW TYPE 609 TOBACCO WHICH WE FEEL HAS A GOOD FUTURE!!! We were told this spring by southern companies they would like us to grow 25 million lbs. Type 609 tobacco.

Do you think that this unsold Type 41 tobacco would remain on your farm if not for Paradise's support to diversify your market through an auction system? If we see any change in this demand situation we will definately inform you in upcoming ads.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

MAY 13-19, 1991

May 19th, St. Dunstan's Day, usually cold.

May 14, 1904, the U S hosts its first Olympic Games in St Louis, Mo May 16, 1866, Congress authorizes the first U S 5-cent piece, called the nickel, although it is 25% nickel and 75% copper May 17, 1792, 24 New York stock brokers meet and sign an agreement to fix uniform rates of commission on stocks and bonds — the beginning of the New York Stock Exchange May 18, 1852, Massachusetts passes a mandatory school attendance law for children between the ages of 8 and 14 What this country needs is a good five-cent nickel — Ed Wynn

Ask the Old Farmer: Where did the expression "with one fell swoop" originate, and what does it really mean? H C , Va

The word fell signifies calamitous or destructive The swoop is whatever energy visits the disaster on the subject such as the attack of a bird of prey

Home Hints Use an old nylon stocking to strain the lumps out of paint

OPINION

What Do You Think?

If you think agriculture is not under the gun from environmental consumer groups, think again. When National Secretary of Agriculture Ed Madigan recently took office, he immediately became a defendant in 3,500 lawsuits filed by environmntal groups.

"I thought that was terrible," Madigan told the American Farm Bureau Federation's National Affairs Conference last week, "until I found out that was only the lawsuits filed against the Forest Service." In all, the new secretary of agriculture is named as a defendant in more than 30,000 such suits.

To fully explain the environmental movements's potential impact on agriculture, Madigan compared the fund-raising success of the nation's top environmental groups with the fund-raising success of the Republican and Democratic parties. While the two political parties raised $90 million, the 26 top environmental groups raised $800 million. This fund-raising ability often translates into the ability to promote environmental policies and regulations that do not consider agriculture.

We did notice that the strong anti-prayer movemet in the nation was suddenly silenced when our loved ones were faced with combat in Desert Storm. It became quite acceptable to offer a prayer in White House ceremonies down to the smallest dairy meeting at the local farm and home center. Could it be that the anti-agriculture attitude in the nation would also see the same sudden change if for some reason the grocery store shelves became empty and all the credit in the world available to the average American taxpayer could not buy more than a small daily serving of milk and a handful of rice from some foreign relief agency?

What do you think?

NOW IS THE TIME

By John Schwartz
Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

Editor's Note:
Last week Jay Irwin, retiring Lancaster County agent, wrote his farewell column and this week John Schwartz picks up the column as the new Lancaster County agent. Thanks to Jay and welcome to John.

To Say Thank You

On behalf of the agricultural community, I say thank you Jay for the excellent columns you wrote every week for the Lancaster Farming. Your advice was sound and followed widely. We are going to miss your daily guidance and many years of wisdom. However, we will always remember your dedication to people and always placing their interests first in making decisions. Best wishes for many happy years of retirement. May your days be filled with joy from seeing friends, love from visiting family and peace from knowing the fruits of your labor have been productive.

To Remember Safety

The spring planting season has arrived. With the uncertainty of weather, efforts are made to get as much done as possible on sunny days. This often tempts farmers to rush and forget some basic safety rules. First, if you have small children or grandchildren around be extra careful. Know where they are at all times. Before moving equipment, check to make sure they are not playing on or around the equipment. Establish strict rules about play areas. Roads are not good playgrounds. Second, stay alert. Get adequate sleep and take a rest break periodically. By resting 15 minutes every few hours will make you more productive. Lastly, keep operating speeds at safe levels. The few extra seconds you may gain by speeding will easily be erased by an accident. Make safety a top priority on your farm all the time.

To Remember Your Neighbors

With the rapid suburban growth we are experiencing, it becomes more important for farmers to develop a good neighbor policy. Know who your neighbors are, their work hours, and when they around. Explain to them what type of farming operations you are involved with. Let them know they may come to you with questions and concerns. Then listen to their concerns and take steps to show you want to help. Most of the problems I encounter with neighbor complaints with farmers involves lack of communication between farmers and neighbors. By opening up good communication lines before a problem arises will go a long way keeping small issues becoming a major problem. Most issues neighbors complain about will be taken care of in time by nature. However, peoples memories will last a lot longer depending on how the issue was dealt with. By listening, explaining the situation, showing concern, using nature properly and being a good neighbor yourself will go a long way in keeping you out of legal actions.

Did you know the Ag Student Council (Penn State) sponsored the Lipizzian horse show recently and in their food booth they sold hotdogs and diet and regular Pepsi? Not one ounce of any dairy product. I feel sure any dairy in State College area would have even given half the product or maybe donated all if they woulf have wanted to promote our product.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHO'S PUSHING YOUR BUTTONS?
May 19, 1991

Background Scripture: 2 Corinthians 5:6-20.

Devotional Reading: 2 Timothy 1:8-14.

That is the title to one of the chapters in our book, What You Need Is What You've Got. In it, my wife Valere and I say: "If you are married to an alcoholic, if you're the parent of a problem child or the child of domineering parents, if you are a hen-pecked husband or an abused wife, you are likely allowing someone else to press the buttons that control your life — both without and within."

It doesn't matter what we call it — "pulling your own strings," letting others manipulate you, surrendering to your fate — you are permitting someone or something else to run what God put into your hands alone — your life, your self. In counselling others I have often found that many people feel that they have little or no control over their lives. They are what they are because someone made them that way — God, parents, teachers, etc. Other people are powerful, while they feel weak and helpless.

LEARNED HELPLESSNESS

But none of us are born helpless or hopeless; that is something we learn, according to Professor Martin E. P. Seligman of the University of Pennsylvania. And we tend to learn these better than almost anything. The good news is that if we have learned to be helpless, we can also learn to be the opposite. The difference lies in what or who we let "push our buttons." For we were not created — not any of us! — to be manipulated or controlled by anything or anyone. Paul says to the Corinthians: "Now the Lord is the Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom" (3:17). All of us need to make a declaration of independence from our manipulating habits, our imprisoning ideas and attitudes, and our enslaving emotions. There isn't anyone who cannot do that, if they really want to!

Sometimes, particularly if our bondage has been a long-term experience, it seems our bonds are too powerful for us to break. So, instead of gritting our teeth and struggling against these negative powers, we need to focus on a positive that is stronger than all the negatives. For example, if right now I command you not to think of strawberry shortcake, I suspect that, no matter how much you might want to comply, you have strawberry shortcake on your mind. You can't defeat a negative with a negative — "Don't!" But you can defeat it with a stronger positive — "Do!" So, if I ask you to please think of your favorite food, the strawberry shortcake will be gone.

IMMERSED IN LOVE

That's how we can free ourselves of being controlled — by concentrating on a positive that is stronger: the love of Christ. Paul says to the Corinthians, "For the love of Christ controls us..." (5: 14). If we immerse ourselves in the love of Christ we will find the negatives will not be able to push our buttons. We will be motivated by it and that will overpower everything else. If we choose to let the love of Christ at the center of our lives, we cannot be victims — only victors.

Farm Credit Bankers Have Long Been Recognized For Achievements In The Field.

Farm Credit bankers possess their share of prestigious achievement awards. But more often than not, the awards they're most proud of are the ones they've earned in, say, conservation, dairy, or veterinary science.

Not many bankers can say that.

That's because most Farm Credit loan officers were born and raised on farms. They grew up active in 4-H and FFA. Many even got their college degrees from ag schools.

What's more, every one of our loan officers goes through the toughest ag lending training program in America.

And because our loan officers understand farming as well as financing, they're not only smarter. They're faster. In fact, they have the power of loan approval equal to most bank presidents'.

So stop by soon and talk with your nearby Farm Credit loan officer. Because whenever you need some extra help in your field, you'll want to work with the banker most accomplished in his.

You're Never Too Old To Hear Better.

Chicago, Ill. — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest hearing aid Beltone has ever developed will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

It's yours for the asking, so send for it now. It is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. The actual aid weighs less than an eighth of an ounce, and it fits completely into the ear canal.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Although a hearing aid may not help everyone, more and more people with hearing losses are being helped. For your free sample send your name, address, and phone number today to: Department 20196, Beltone Electronics Corporation, 4201 West Victoria Street, Chicago, Illinois 60646.

State Grange Testifies On Wetland Legislation

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Even though the protection of wetlands was not meant to hinder agricultural activities, the farming industry has been caught in the crossfire, according to the Pennsylvania State Grange legislative director.

Brenda Shambaugh recently testified before the Senate Environmental Resources and Energy Committee on SB 982 and 983 which deals with the wetland issue.

The Grange is in favor of many aspects of the legislation including agricultural exemption in certain cases. Normal farming activities should be exempt on all land used for agriculture during anytime in the last 25 years, according to Shambaugh.

"This is the intent of the bill and we would like to see it specifically stated," Shambaugh said.

The Grange also supports the removal of wetlands from farm value for tax purposes if it cannot be farmed, and an amendment stating that a wetlands permit should automatically be granted if DER has not responded to the agricultural permit request within the specified time frame.

One of the major problems with wetlands is the fact that several definitions are being used. Shambaugh said the Grange would like to see DER adopt the federal definition and then map the wetlands so farmers will know where they are on his/her property.

Several areas of the legislation put a financial burden on the farmer and should be eliminated, according to Shambaugh. Currently the legislation includes costly permits for each activity. The Grange feels a one-time permit fee is all that is needed. Also, once mapping is completed, the farmer would have to pay DER to obtain the information.

"Since a farmer's livelihood could be at stake," Shambaugh said, "we do not believe this information should have to be purchased.

"We also question a 10 year permit block for wetland offenders in the bill. While we agree that those who continually abuse the system should not be allowed to continue receiving permits, we believe there is so much confusion and ambiguity surrounding the wetlands issue, that one or two mistakes should not carry a decade sentence."

Proposal of this legislation is a positive step to ensuring a healthy agricultural economic base in the Commonwealth, according to Shambaugh. "As our number one industry, we cannot afford to gravely hinder agricultural operations."

The Pennsylvania State Grange represents more than 40,000 rural and farming Pennsylvanians. It is the oldest fraternal farm organization and one of the largest in the nation.

Irwin Receives Emeritus Title

At a retirement party, on Thursday evening, complete with blue and white ballons, spotlights, and ice cream, Jay Irwin, retiring Lancaster County agent, and his wife Betty were honored by family, farmers, agribusiness associates, and friends — more than 300 of them. Many citations, remarks of praise and admiration, were given.

In a special tribute, the title of County Agent Emeritus was created by Penn State in order for Jay to maintain his valuable presence in the extension system.

Jay and Betty are scheduled to fly to Poland in early June to represent the university on a teaching mission to the Polish County Agent System. John Schwartz, the newly appointed Lancaster County agent, made the announcement and the presentation.

It's an important fact, because real estate speculation has been a major reason for dairymen to make changes in operations — the higher land prices necessitate extreme farm operation thriftiness in order to pay off the high loans often required to buy a farm from another farmer.

Even from one generation to the next.

And many times, using the land for agriculture isn't profitable enough to pay for the land.

Sitting on some of Lebanon County's richest soil, surrounded by menacing housing developments and strip malls, is the Smith farm, located just north of Route 422 in Palmyra.

On the turn-of-the-century farm is an all-registered Guernsey herd that traces its roots back with the farm family who nurtured it.

There is no dispute that the gentle, red and white cattle with the pink snouts are not the best breed for producing pounds of milk per animal.

But for the amount of feed they require, the size of the buildings needed to house the animals, and the other overhead costs involved, Guernseys can compete in the ever-tightening battle to be profitable, according to the Smiths.

David Smith, and the rest of his family, is content with the 65-head milking herd. Altogether, with replacements and dry cows, they have about 160 head.

A third generation Guernsey breeder, David, 34, said he is not prejudiced against other breeds, however.

One of the strongest reasons for the Smiths having Guernseys dates back to a decision made early in the century, when the family herd was started by David's grandfather, Jacob Smith.

David Smith (right) and Kenneth Winebark, county extension agent, discuss the results of the Lebanon County Dairy Judging teams at last Saturday's contests at the Penn State Dairy Expo in State College. Smith is one of the team's coaches and a former participant. The junior team was high team in their competition, while the senior team came in seventh.

This cow and the next one down the line have been producing 90 pounds of milk a day for the Smiths. That's good for any breed.

Jacob had been a milk tester in Lebanon County during the 1920s and 30s. In the 1930s he bought his father's farm and some Guernsey cattle to start his own dairy farm.

David's father Robert (the eldest son of Jacob) said his father started the herd during the brief age of "Golden Guernsey" milk. Guernsey milk is high in butterfat, at a breed average 4 percent, and also high in protein. It has a golden tint to it, as compared to some of the very white milk of Holsteins.

The Golden Guernsey era was so named because of selling promotions about the richness of the Guernsey's milk.

Although that era has disappeared for a variety of reasons, the Guernsey breed continues to produce rich milk and production per cow has been increasing.

However, many of the dairy farms which keep Guernseys are located near cheese plants or other industries which rely on milk with high component percentages. And cheese manufacturers pay premiums on protein.

The Smiths don't have such a plant nearby. They don't get any extra money for having cattle produce high amounts of butterfat and protein per volume of milk.

However, the Smiths continue to keep Guernsey cattle by choice and because of heritage, and because its practical.

Robert worked for his father for years before taking it over in 1978. In fact, Robert said he had never been employed anywhere else.

"I made the decision early," he said. "I was home ever since I was in high school."

After working for so long with the herd, he continued working with it. There was no reason to change things, he said.

The stanchion barn on the home farm is built to accomodate Guernseys. It would have to be changed to hold fewer and larger Holsteins.

That would not make sense.

David echoed the same sentiment. He said he likes Guernseys, but he likes other breeds of cattle as well.

A member of the state Guernsey Association (recently reading pedigrees for their Blue Halter spring sale in Chambersburg), and enjoys the Guernsey breed, he said would never put down any dairy breed in comparison to another.

"They all have their advantages," he said.

However, he said he knows of numerous times when a Holstein has kicked, deliberately stepped on a foot or squeezed against a man who was trying to attatch a milker.

He said he cannot report the same type of behavior from his Guernseys.

His father agreed.

"They have a nice temperament. They're nice to work with. But I guess the biggest thing is, I was around them," Robert said. "Somewhere along the line (as a milk tester) he (Jacob) must have taken a liking to them."

And Robert did too, as David does also.

(Turn to Page A22)

David went to college, to Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University for their dairy program. Though his own 4-H project animals were Guernseys, he got a lot of exposure to other breeds through county 4-H, and cattle judging. Also, the college has both a strong Holstein and a Jersey herd.

But that didn't sway his mind about Guernseys.

After school, about 10 years ago, he came back to work the farm. He got the family involved in showing the animals. About the same time, they closed the herd and have been breeding their own replacement stock.

Smith's Guernseys: Breed Of Choice Or Heritage?

"It cuts down on any problems with disease," David said. "It would be nice to have an isolation area to keep new animals, but we don't have the room for an isolation area. We use all the area we have."

Robert said they use all their available land for dairy production. In the past his father used to keep hogs and chickens for family use and local sale, but times changed.

David does the breeding now and is active in trying to improve the breed.

Robert said his father was also active in maintaining an all-registered herd. Robert carried on the tradition.

For breeding goals, the emphasis was clearly on production and longevity — good udders and good legs.

"We hope we improved type," Robert said. "(Back then) We had a local breeder do all the breeding."

For the Guernsey breed, Robert said that while the number of animals in the state is continually decreasing, as is the case with other breeds, "We try to keep our breed improving type-wise and with production."

The farm is actually a combination of two farms that were started independently, according to Robert. Jacob started renting the adjacent farm, then bought it during the 1960s.

The size of the farm has not changed since.

The adjacent farm is different construction. It has a high limestone-walled bank barn that currently houses the heifers. A picturesque, old red-tiled silo, stands next to it, but that's no longer in use.

In half of the farmhouse (of the adjacent farm) is where Dave lives with his wife Kathy and two children, Erin, 4, and Joel 11 months. He shares the house with a fulltime herdsman Tom Hostetter, who with his wife Gloria, has three children showing dairy animals in 4-H . . . guess which breed.

Actually, Hostetter's children have an aged cow and two 3-year-olds. The aged cow gave a September heifer calf, and the 3-year-olds produced June and March heifer calves.

The set up of the milking barn has remained at 65 stalls since Jacob expanded it from about 45 stalls, years ago. The 2-inch pipeline was installed about 20 years ago.

The heavy beams of both barns attest to the age and durability of the structures. And with windows and large fans, ventilation in the milking barn is very good.

Manure is not a problem, using classical aisle gutters with scrapers. Spreading manure is not a problem either, since the 150 acres can adequately carry the load.

The most recent rolling herd average for the herd is 19,264 pounds of milk, 672 pounds of fat and 595 pounds of protein.

Dave said the production has been increasing because of an improvement in forage quality. This year protein levels in hay have been around 19 percent. Last year, protein levels in hay were about 15 percent.

The Smiths use horizontal trench silage storage with good results and feed a mixture of hay, grain and corn silage.

Dave said that eventually, when milk prices turn around, he'd like to switch to total mixed rations, but for now the cost is prohibitive and he hand scoops grain from a cart. He fills the cart from an over head shute located at one end of the ailse of the milking barn.

According to the Smiths, the problem with the dairy industry isn't because of what breeds are being used. The problems have more to do with artificial and manipulated demands.

In the meantime, David continues to work steadily and volunteer his help in coaching the Lebanon County dairy judging team, along with Alan Hostetter and John Bombgardner.

In fact the whole family is involved in dairying in some way or the other.

Tom Smith, the youngest of the three Smith sons, is a graduate of Delaware Valley College and he works for Atlantic Breeders Cooperative as a technician.

Dave's other brother, Dale, also helps out at the family farm in addition to driving school bus and coaching track and wrestling at Palmyra High School.

Dairy Farmers Concerned About Farm-Retail Price Spread

KARL BERGER
Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON, DC — As the downturn in farm milk prices continues, the hard times threaten to drive a wedge between those who make milk and those who market it.

Consider: since the winter of 1990, milk checks have been diminished by 25-30 percent.

The decrease — almost $5 a hundredweight — translates into roughly 20 cents a half-gallon. Therefore, a simple accounting would conclude that's the amount by which retail fluid milk prices should have dropped as well.

But they haven't, at least by the amount, a fact that has not been lost on hard-pressed dairy farmers. They're been grumbling for months that retail dairy product prices did not decline as their price plummeted. The farmers' frustration spilled over at a hearing last month in Washington before the Livestock, Dairy and Poultry Subcommittee of the House Agricultural Committee.

Testifying at that meeting, Jim Barr, the chief executive of the National Milk Producers Federation, said that consumers have not benefitted from low farm milk prices. Ed Coughlin, another National Milk official, said a cursory comparison using Bureau of Labor statistics for January 1991 indicated only a 2.1-cent decrease in average fluid milk prices at the retail level over a one-year period in which farm milk prices dropped the equivalent of 18.3 cents a half-gallon.

And farmers in Wisconsin garnered headlines for noting that retail cheese prices held firm and even increased in the latter half of 1990 while farm prices dropped more than 20 percent.

The issue is not merely sour grapes. Lower prices presumably mean higher consumption and sales figures were not good for the dairy industry in 1990. In fact, the "commercial disappearance" of dairy products actually declined 2.5 percent in the final quarter of the year and dropped one percent compared to year-earlier levels again in the first quarter of 1991, according to Jim Fraher, an economist with Atlantic Dairy Cooperative.

Nonetheless, the issue has begun to fade from the dairy industry's agenda as retail prices for various products have begun to decline (Kraft General Foods, the nation's largest cheese retailer, recently announced a 17-cent reduction in its wholesale cheese price) and as agricultural economics weigh in with evidence that these pricing patterns are nothing out of the ordinary.

Farmers tend to assume that retail prices are a simple function of adding x number of cents onto processors' raw milk costs. But this simple theory ignores the fact that retail costs are driven by a complex mixture of factors, according to Bob Yonkers, a Penn State University economist. Processors, he said, are often middlemen whose prices are limited by competition and other factors.

Among the economists who testified at the April hearing were several from Texas A & M University who have studied the relationship between farm and retail prices of milk from 1979 to 1989. Their conclusion was that retail prices do indeed change as farm prices change, but it is not a one-to-one relationship. Rather, the retail price goes up or down 38 cents as the farm price goes up or down $1.

The relationship makes sense, Yonkers said, when you consider that the latest U.S. Department of Agriculture statistics, for 1988, indicate that dairymen receive 40 cents of every dollar made selling dairy products to the consumer. This farm-retail price spread had grown (the farmers' share of retail income has shrunk) in recent years as marketers have provided more services in the form of packaging and the like and as increased efficiencies on the farm have driven down raw milk costs. The 40-percent share is an average figure; it would be somewhat higher for fluid products; somewhat less; for manufactured ones, Yonkers said.

Deadline Nears For Entry Into New 4-H Program

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — There's a new program for 4-H youth in the seven county southeastern region of Pennsylvania that enables the members to better prepare for real world production goals.

The brainchild of two extension agents in Lebanon and Lancaster counties and a respresentative of White Oak Mills feed company in Elizabethtown, the program is called the "Southeast Pa. 4-H Market Hog Derby."

The deadline for weighing in animals is Wednesday. Those interested in participating should call their extension agents immediately and set up a time for weighing in their animals.

According to Kenneth Winebark, Lebanon County livestock agent, "It's a derby. It's a race to see which animal can put on the most pounds of lean meat from May until August 21; roughly 75 days, which is a normal production scheme.

"The animals weighed in are the typical feeder pigs which would be going into a feeder pig operation," Winebark said.

Counties participating include Berks, Chester, Dauphin, Lancaster, Lebanon, Schuylkill and York. Each current 4-H member can nomiate three hogs to be identified and weighed in for evaluation.

Feeder pigs up to 60 pounds will be accepted into the program. The animals are returned to the members farm for feeding and care. One of three will be chosen to compete in the Market Hog Derby.

An entry fee of $15 per three head is payable at weigh-in. Weights must be certified by the county agent.

Winebark said the program has been designed to mirror, as best as possible, all aspects of real feeder pig production.

The hogs will be evaluated using the same Lean Gain formula devised by the National Pork Producers Council.

Specifically there are three basic variables that will be evaluated:

• Meat Animal Characteristics — including loin eye muscle, backfat thickness, carcass quality, carcass length and dressing percentage.

• Average Daily Gain on test — will be calculated from weigh-in to weigh-off date, which starts 9 a.m. August 21.

• Structural Correctness and design of hog in regards to soundness and function.

"This basically came about to take a look at economical production of our 4-H projects and to take a look at the real world aspects," Winebark said, "to take in not only the growth of the animal, but also the carcass value for the consumer and the overall conformation and structural correctness of the animal.

"It's an attempt to encourage our youth to look beyond just the show ring and striving to have just a champion in a show," Winebark said.

The differences between show competitions are basic.

"It's something similar to what we've doing for a number of years, but seperately," Winebark said. "It's the first time it will all come together. We have had some counties hold rate-of-gain contests and

This year a livestock judging contest will be held on Saturday, May 25, starting at 1 p.m., followed by the showmanship contest at 5 p.m. In 1991, the showmanship contest will again be divided into three age divisions.

On Sunday, May 26, the steers and breeding classes are judged. As in the past, the 1991 Classic will offer registered steer classes. Cash prizes and trophies will be awarded and a grand and reserve champion steer will be chosen from breeds represented. Crossbred steers will also compete for premiums to be paid in all steer classes, as well as for grand and reserve trophies. A supreme champion steer will then be named, the overall show champion and a cash jackpot will be paid to this winner.

In the breeding show, premiums will be paid for all classes and trophies will be awarded for grand champion, reserve champion, and bred and owned for each of the breeds as well as for an unrestricted "commercial" class.

Additional information about the 1991 Classic is being prepared for mailing to past participants and breed associations. For other answers to questions about this show, county extension agents will have brochures and entry forms. For more information, contact the Keystone Junior Beef Classic Committee, c/o Bob Calvert, Mercer County Extension Office, P.O. Box 530, Mercer, PA 16137.

(PAFC), the organization's primary mission is to organize and promote educational programs and materials about the cooperative way of doing business. This mission is accomplished through the support of the Penn State Cooperative Business Education program.

The longest running PCC program is the Summer Youth Institute. This four-day activity is held annually at the end of June for approximately 100 high school students. It includes workshops designed to better inform the attendees about cooperative business principles, along with other important issues that could include food safety, environmental concerns, listening skills, career opportunities, legislative issues and more! Activities include organizing and running a mini cooperative, touring a nearby cooperative, computer simulation programs as well as numerous recreational activities. Now in its 31st year, the PCC Summer Youth Institute is designed to help develop tomorrow's leaders.

Other educational programs supported by PCC include a three-day summer conference for young farm leaders, programs for cooperative directors and employees, programs for Extension personnel and for teachers of agriculture.

On a part-time basis, the PCC executive director helps to coordinate and support the above programs, works with the PCC board of directors, acts as a liaison with the Penn State Cooperative Business Education program and represents the organization at numerous functions. The organization's office is located in State College. Interested persons should write to Jay V. Rush, PCC President, 3301 West Market Street, P.O. Box 2427, York, PA 17405.

NMC Updates Teat Dipping Testing Methods

FOCUS

Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association

Call 1-800-DHI-TEST for service or information

According to the National Mastitis Council, it has revised its procedures for suggested testing of the effectiveness of teat dips.

Although it does not test teat dips, NMC makes recommendations to business which do.

Postmilking teat dipping is one of the most effective management practices to prevent mastitis.

Numerous products are marketed as teat dips, however no government agency requires data to establish whether a particular teat dip effectively reduces the incidence of new intramammary infections (efficacy data).

Several years ago, the National Mastitis Council (NMC) developed protocols to provide teat dip manufacturers with standardized test methods for determining teat dip efficacy.

The protocols detail experimental design; selection of herds, cows, and quarters; preparation of bacterial cultures; teat dipping; sampling schedule and procedures; criteria for diagnosing infections; size and duradon of trial; and presentation of data.

Teat dip efficacy studies are conducted under either 1) experimental challenge conditions, or 2) natural exposure conditions.

"Experimental challenge studies" evaluate the ability of a teat dip to prevent new intramammary infections when teats are experimentally challenged with mastitis pathogens. Teats are experimentally challenged by immersion in a bacterial suspension containing specific pathogens immediately after milking units are removed. This protocol determines efficacy under experimental conditions only.

"Natural exposure studies" evaluate the ability of a teat dip to prevent naturally occurring infections in cows under normal field conditions. Natural exposure with a negative control compares a new teat dip product to no teat dipping. Natural exposure with a positive control compares a new teat dip product to a teat dip of known efficacy.

The original NMC protocols, developed in the 197O's, were designated A, B, and C.

Protocol A, intended as a screening test only, measured bactericidal activity of a teat dip formulation on teat skin.

Protocol B outlined procedures to determine ability of a teat dip to prevent infections under experimental challenge conditions.

Protocol C outlined procedures to determine ability of a teat dip to prevent natural infections under normal field conditions.

NMC recently revised the protocols to enhance scientific merit, reflect new technologies, and further ensure standardization of test procedures. The previous alphabetical name designations (A, B, and C) were dropped and changed to identify the investigative method used.

The revisions do not invalidate or change the meaning of previous efficacy studies, or require that they be redone.

NMC currently recommends the following protocols: 1) Efficacy of a Postmilking Teat Dip After Experimental Exposure of Teats to Mastitis Pathogens (compares to former protocol B); 2) Efficacy of a Postmilking Teat Dip Based on Reduction of Naturally Occurring New Intramammary Infections (compares to former protocol C, using a negative control); and 3) Comparing an Experimental Postmilking Teat Dip with a Product of Known Efficacy Based on Incidence of Naturally Occurring New Intramammary Infections (compares to former protocol C, using a positive control).

Note that former Protocol A is no longer recommended.

NMC does not test or approve teat dips - NMC only recommends protocols for manufacturers to use

"In terms of raising animals for just a show, we give them (4H members) certain (hog) weights they have to meet. In this program, the animals are weighed-in and weighed-off, and we use that as part of the forumla in giving a final ranking.

"We will also be making carcass measurements and that will also be a part of the formula. Actually, the formula itself is the National Pork Producers Council's Lean Gain formula."

The derby is also different from typical hoof and rail competitions and others that have been put on to date.

"In the hoof and rail, you judge on hoof and rail — it doesn't matter how efficiently it was grown. (The derby) is designed basically to incorporate all facets of the industry.

"The youth are required to keep a record of their feed used and to calculate feed efficiency of their animals in order to be placed in the program," he said.

The only difference between the derby and real production management is determining efficiency of cost-to-profit. However, Winebark said, "It's something they can still do. That's part of their project book. But that won't be taken into any consideration here."

The other thing taken into account in the final judging formula is the structural conformation score and that will be used from the standpoint of testing overall soundness and structural correctness in the animal. Adjustments will be made acccording to a five-point scale.

Scores ranging from one to five points will be given to each hog to represent their structural soundness. A score of five points represents a virtually flawless hog. The actual scores are to be awarded at 7:30 p.m. on August 21 at the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds.

A panel of three judges will score the hogs. The judges represent a different sector of the production industry — a packer, a breeder, and an educator.

For this first derby, the judges are to be Doug Clemens from Hatfield Quality Meats Inc.; Henery Holloway, a breeder and also former fieldman for the York, Hampshire and Chester Association; and Keith Bryan, the coach of the Penn State University livestock judging team.

In addition, Winebark said there will be a separate panel of judges making selections of the animals on foot. Those judges are yet to be determined.

The need for a panel of judges for the on-foot selection is to better represent real-industry values.

"Instead of one judge's selection determining the top animals, we're looking for an animal selection that is more represenative of what the industry wants," Wine bark said.

There are also additional benefits to the derby for those who participate, Winebark said.

"We plan, on that day (of the carcass evaluation, August 23, at Stoltzfus Bros. Meats, in Intercourse), of doing some ultrasound scanning of the animals to teach how its done and the reasoning, and so that we can compare the results with the actual carcass data.

Stoltzfus will slaughter and purchase all animals and premiums will be awarded to all hogs in the program with special awards presented to winners.

All hogs are to be slaughtered free to participants and purchase price from Stoltzfus is to be on a grade and yield basis.

"We'll be having an evening meeting on August 23 for the exhibitors and any others interested, to look at the carcasses, and to present the awards," Winebark said.

Entry blanks are available from local county extension offices. Checks should be made payable to: South East PA 4-H Market Derby.

Kenneth Winebark, Lebanon County extension agent, weighs in a feeder pig entry for the new Southeast Pennsylvania 4-H Market Hog Derby, while Daryl Bomgardner and brother Craig look on.

Be aware that federal regulations do not require efficacy data on teat dip products. Therefore, teat dips can be manufactured and marketed without demonstrating effectiveness.

In this "buyer beware" market, the consumer is responsible for determining whether a particular product has been tested and proven effective. Before using or recommending a particular product, request written information from the manufacturer or dealer on compliance with federal regulations and results of controlled research studies showing effectiveness.

Pa. Century Farms Honored

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Thirty-one farms were recently designated by the State Department of Agriculture as official Pennsylvania Century Farms, according to Secretary of Agriculture Boyd E. Wolff.

"We are pleased to honor these farm owners for their dedication and contributions to our agricultural heritage. The farm family is still the backbone of our state and nation, and we are firmly committed to the preservation of our farmland resources," he said.

The Century Farms Program was established to help publicize the strengths and durability of Pennsylvania farm families and to stress the importance of agriculture to all citizens of the Commonwealth. This brings to 1,545 the number of farms recognized by the department as Century Farms.

To qualify as a Pennsylvania Century Farm, the farm must be owned by the same family for 100 or more consecutive years and a family member must currently live on the farm. In addition, the farm must contain at least 10 of the original acres or gross more than $1,000 annually from the sale of farm products. Applications are available from the Department of Agriculture by calling (717) 787-4737.

During the past four years as state agriculture secretary, the 59-year-old Wolff (he will be 60 on May 17), has overseen an agency that has incorporated a number of new programs and the continued refurbishing of the state Farm Show complex.

However, like many agencies in state government, the Department of Agriculture has suffered a number of financial support cuts which have resulted in the loss of rank and file workers to carry out some of the programs. Some of the workers were recently furloughed. Other positions, vacated through retirement or other means, remain unfilled.

In an attempt to maintain the agency's ability to continue service, several programs have been combined, such as the Bureau of Weights and Measures with the Bureau of Amusement Rides and Attractions.

In addition to reductions in state support to the department, the agricultural industry continues to have its ups and downs.

Diseases, record low milk prices to dairymen following a year of record high milk prices, uncertain, but promising world markets, the possibility of free markets with Mexico and Canada, increased changes of rural to urban populations, bank failures, . . . all combine to create one of the most complex atmospheres for those attempting to make a living through agriculture.

In a telephone interview Thursday, Wolff said his outlook for Pennsylvania's agricultural industry remained optimistic. He said he had a positive outlook for the functionability of the PDA, despite hard cutbacks in state tax dollars to the department.

"We're lean. We did some furloughs in February, but we're currently hiring some people who will be filling some critical positions. And when the budget gets settled I hope we will be able to hire some more people.

"We took some setbacks but every agency had to do that. It's been a difficult year," Wolff said.

"When I talk to my counterparts — at DER, or welfare, or anywhere — it's just been a rough year," he said. "With the governor's (new) budget and a tax increase, it's a starting point," he said.

According to Wolff, "This is the third time this century (there's been a budget problem due to the economy), in 1930, 1977 and this year.

"When the budget was passed last July, we made the best estimate. It will probably be half a billion (dollars) less than anticipated.

"And because of the national econcomy going bad, there's more welfare, increased cost of Medicare, the cost of special education has gone up. If you take the half a billion (underestimated) and add half a billion in increased costs from last July, that put us where we are.

"We all took cuts. I don't feel agriculture took any more of a cut than any other agency."

Over the past four years, Wolf said a number of important goals have been achieved.

"The first four years, we got the farmland preservation going, we got the animal health commission appointed to better animal diagnostics to the farmers, and we've expanded the promotion and marketing efforts through the six groups.

"In the coming four years we want to get as many farms as possible in the farmland preservation. We have 36 farms now. We hope to continue with that program."

The farmland preservation program is on the brink of taking off, according to Wolff. In order to be considered for the program, a landowner must first place his land into an agricultural security area.

"In the Ag Security Areas, there are over 1.27 million acres. That's an attempt to save farmland too," he said. Prior to the establishment of the farmland preservation program — which had Sen. Noah Wenger, R-Lancaster, as its a prime sponosor — less than 500,000 acres were designated as an agricultural security area.

Wolff said he is also looking foward to furthering the other programs that have been initiated.

"I hope we can get our diagnostic program in operation, and we will continue to market Pennsylvania products."

The renovation of the 60-acre state Farm Show complex also lists high on achievements begun during the past four years.

"The roof is on, the new lighting system is 99 percent in, the heating system will be complete this summer," Wolff said.

"We're going to break ground for new building maybe this month, probably in May, but at least in June."

Gov. Casey has come under fire from both Republican and Democratic legislators for the budget deficit and for proposals from his Office of the Budget which attacked several agricultural programs.

With Casey no longer eligible to run for another term in office, and Wolff confirmed, some have suggested that perhaps Wolff might block political influences from affecting the agriculture department.

However, Wolff said there is nothing to block.

"I try to keep the department as non-partisan as we can. There's not a better system than democracy and sometimes we get critical of it.

"The Republican Caucus, they like to question the governor's support for agriculture. I just point to what we've been able to do over the last four years. Economically, $72 million went to agriculture and forestry.

"They (legislators and opposition to Casey) helped too, because they passed legislation, but if it wouldn't have been for his (Casey's) support, those things wouldn't have happened," Wolff said.

For the future, Wolff said he hopes to see agriculture prosper and agribusiness grow.

"I intend to continue the marketing promotions and the economic development programs.

"There's an aquaculture summit May 21 and May 22 and we're developing a new-farmer program where we're going to help in Bedford County (as a pilot program for backing up low-interest bank loans to beginning farmers).

"We're going to try to help farmers farm without adversely affecting the environment. With all the (environmental) issues, we just have to be conscious about how we farm."

Furthermore, Wolff said that efforts need to be concentrated on education of the non-farming public.

"Another goal would be consumer outreach, so that the non-farm folks appreciate agriculture. They get the cheapest and most wholesome food supply.

"And we should try to work with consumers so that they see how we treat our animals and ask their understanding of why we need chemicals to farm for a safe food supply.

"On the environmental issues we're developing a plan to help farmers dispose of (waste) chemicals and chemcial containers. It's a pilot program."

On the horizon are several calls from groups looking for the deparment of agriculture to take on additional responsibilities, such as certifying people for nutrient managment, which is being developed in the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee and has received a great deal of support from agricultural organizations.

Wolff said there is room for expanded responsibility within the department, but not without adequate funding.

"We can do the certification," Wolff said. "That would not be a big program.

"It's easy for the Legislature to give a new program. We don't object. But when they give us a new program we need the dollars to operate the new program."

Wolff said the cutback of services from the agriculture department are understood by the farmers the department serves.

For example, the department used to have several toll-free telephone numbers available to the public. They were eliminated in order to save about $30,000.

According to Wolff, when it came out that severe cutbacks were going to be necessary, "We looked at the whole department. That 800 number — and it became a number used for information and we were doing an awful lot of calls that were information type — farmers are conservative by nature and it's been a bad year, and they don't mind paying for a phone call. They'd rather see us be conservative than raise taxes."

Berks Co. Dairy Princess Holds No Illusions About Milk

CONNIE LEINBACH
Berks Co. Correspondent

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — The healthful benefits of milk are no illusion, Berks County's new Dairy Princess, Kelly Gelsinger, proclaims.

Gelsinger, 17, of Womelsdorf R.D. 1, was crowned with the title Saturday night during the coronation pageant in the Berks County Agriculture Center. She was the only contestant to seek the crown from last year's winner, Suzann Moyer.

Having lived on her grandfather's dairy farm all her life, Kelly appreciates country life. "I'm looking forward to promoting milk and milk products," she said.

Given her performing talents and outgoing personality displayed during the pageant, she should have no problem. Kelly charmed the audience with a magic show, depicting the benefits of drinking milk — strong bodies, vitamins and minerals. Eschewing such milk product fakes as whipped dessert topping and creamer for coffee, Kelly said, as she performed a trick: "Don't be fooled. Always look for the 'Real' seal.

Kelly is a junior at Conrad Weiser High School. She is active in FFA, soccer, and the girls' chorus. Her activities with the children's ministry at her church, Myerstown Grace Bretheren, involve puppets and clowning.

The field of contestants for the Li'l Miss Dairy Princess was much larger. Rachel Emily Hartman, a spunky 5-year-old from Hamburg, captured that honor over five others.

"It's like a dream come true," Rachel said after the pageant. She is the daughter of Bruce and Pollyanna Hartman, who milk 56 Holsteins on their 160-acre farm near Hamburg. Rachel said she likes white over chocolate milk and helps to sweep the barn.

When asked by toastmaster Tammy Balthaser if she ever drinks milk, Rachel said, "Sometimes I get to drink milk."

Six-year-old Joel Bubbenmoyer serenaded the new princesses with "Thank Heaven for Little Girls," after the two had received their crowns. Joel of Fleetwood also sang and told jokes while the judges were making their decision about the Li'l Miss.

"Where do cows take their dates on Valentine's Day?" he asked. "To the m-o-o-o-vies!"

The sparkling youngster appears every Sunday at noon on Al Alberts Showcase, channel 6. He also has appeared at the Valley Forge Music Fair and has entertained in some of the casinos in Atlantic City. In her farewell speech, Suzann said having been Dairy Princess helped her grow in all areas of her life and that she is not as shy as she was before she won the honor.

"It's easier to get up in front of a group and speak," Suzann noted. Her schedule, averaging 12 promotions a month, included farm tours, and speaking at schools, granges and fairs. A high-school senior, Suzann plans to continue living and working on her parents' 1,000-acre farm in New Tripoli, Lehigh County. She also plans to continue breeding and selling miniature horses, which she has done for more than a year. Suzann honored several Berks County pupils for winning her coloring contest in which elementary students colored a picture of a cow. The winners were Ryan Dish, nursery, Little People Day School, Exeter Township; Mark Nester, kindergarten, Richmond Elementary; Jolene Longenecker, first grade, Strausstown Elementary; Kelly Gernert, second grade, Greenwich Elementary; Heather Avedissian, third grade, Lincoln Park Elementary; Sara Marks, fourth grade; and Kelly Mast, fifth grade, both of Twin Valley Elementary.

Suzann also thanked Jill Neiman, the 1990 Li'l Miss Dairy Princess, for her companionship while attending fairs and other functions throughout the year. The pageant is sponsored by the Berks County Milk Production Committee. It was coordinated by Mary Haag, who said the committee is looking for another coordinator to organize the bookings and promotions for the princess. Anyone interested in this volunteer job is asked to call Haag at (215) 926-4211.

Newly crowned Berks County Dairy Princess Kelly Gelsinger and Li'l Miss Jill Neiman are eager to promote milk.

Eastern Tent Caterpillars Not Gypsy Moth

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Spring in Maryland usually is announced by the appearance of Eastern tent caterpillar nests in trees across the state.

Whether in trees along roadsides or in residential areas, the tent caterpillar, a native of North America, is everywhere.

Wild cherry trees are the favorite host, along with apple, crabapple, plum, peach, rose, hawthorne, and certain shade trees.

Eastern tent caterpillar infestations are often confused with gypsy moth infestation. Gypsy moth caterpillars hatch about two weeks later, do not produce silken webbing along the trunks of trees or silken tents in the branches of trees, and are more commonly found on oak trees than are Eastern tent caterpillars.

Tent caterpillars are up to 2½ -inches long, with a solid white stripe along the back, and a row of pale blue oval spots along each side. The body is covered by long, fine, light brown hairs.

Gypsy moth caterpillars are about the same size, but are distinguished by five pairs of blue spots, followed by six pairs of red spots on their backs. No other caterpillar has these distinct markings. The caterpillars are covered by long black hairs and many people suffer allergic reactions to contact with the hairs.

Eastern tent caterpillar eggs usually start to hatch in early to mid-April and the young caterpillars, which are only about ¼ -inch long when they hatch, immediately begin building the characteristic silk tents where tree branches join together.

Caterpillars leave the tent only to feed, and continue to enlarge the tent as they grow.

When fully grown, they leave the trees to search for hiding places to spin cocoons. After two weeks in the cocoon, adult moths emerge to mate and the female lays eggs. The egg masses are dark, shiny grey and are laid in a band around a small branch. There is only one generation each year.

If caterpillars are abundant, they may eat all the leaves on a tree. While this may weaken the tree, it seldom kills it.

Defoliated trees should be watered and fertilized, wherever possible. Physical removal of the tents is a good control practice.

High value ornamental plants, or landscape trees that have been defoliated two or three years, can be sprayed with an insecticide during the time the caterpillars are active. Once caterpillars leave the tree, control is much more difficult.

Because the tent caterpillar is a native North American insect, outbreaks are usually controlled by naturally occurring parasites or predators.

In contrast, the gypsy moth is not a native insect, it was introduced to North America from Europe, and has few natural parasites or predators. Gypsy moth caterpillars defoliate and may kill oaks and other hardwood trees in urban residential or rural areas.

To reduce widespread tree mortality, the Maryland Department of Agriculture, in cooperation with federal and county agencies, conducts a statewide gypsy moth suppression program.

Each homeowner should take steps to limit gypsy moth damage to landscape trees or shrubs.

For information on ways to control Eastern tent caterpillar or gypsy moth, call your County Cooperative Extension Office or Dr. Robert Rabaglia, Forest Pest Management Section, Maryland Department of Agriculture, (301) 841-5922.

Berks Co. Recognizes FFA Members

CONNIE LEINBACH
Berks Co. Correspondent

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — David Rost, a senior at Twin Valley High School, Elverson, won first place Tuesday night for his FFA project in a statewide contest sponsored by the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

It was the third straight year a student from the school won this honor, said Ronald Frederick, agriculture instructor for the school.

Rost and more than 20 other FFA members received awards during a banquet in the Kutztown Grange.

Rost won the honor, competing with nearly 20 other contestants, for his detailed record book about his activities in improving wildlife habitat. Robert L. Prall, a state conservation officer, said Rost had to make up an outline, follow it through, and keep a record of his efforts, including photos.

Some of the things Rost did for his project included planting trees, building up brush, and border cutting. He also built boxes for wood ducks and blue birds, Frederick said.

Frederick said Rost plans to attend the Pennsylvania School of Technology in Williamsport next year with a major in forestry.

Rodger Bashore, president of the county FFA and a member of the Oley Valley FFA, was named county star farmer. He said his application for the award listed his numerous accomplishments throughout the year in production farming of swine, beef, dairy, corn, and soybeans.

Randy Balthaser, of the Hamburg FFA and vice-president of the county group, was runner-up for the honor.

Mike Angstadt of the Oley Valley FFA was named county star agribusinessman. It was his extensive experience working for Pikeville Equipment, which sells farm equipment, that netted him the honor, he said. He added that he hopes someday to become a business manager.

Other applicants for this honor were Chad Stambaugh and Steve Davis, both of the Hamburg FFA.

The new county officers for 1991-1992 are Todd Rabenold, Kutztown, president; Wendy Jesiolowski, Oley Valley, vice president; Ryan Marshall, Twin Valley, secretary; Brian Yorkoski, Kutztown, treasurer; Alice Strause, Hamburg, reporter; Dale Stauffer, Tulpehocken, sentinel; and Andy Mast, Twin Valley, chaplain.

David Rost, a senior at Twin Valley High School, recieves first-place honors Tuesday night for his FFA forestry project in a statewide contest sponsored by the Pennsylvania Game Commission. Giving Rost the award is Robert L. Prall, conservation officer. In the background is Alan C. Scott, conservation officer.

Picnic events are to start at 11 a.m. There will be an opportunity to view Harpster's dairy operation, try some fly fishing, visit special guests, learn about new technologies coming in the dairy industry, enjoy a luncheon picnic and visit with fellow Holstein breeders.

For those interest in making a complete day of activities, the Central Pennsylvania Festival of the Arts is scheduled for the same weekend in State College. Part of the day could be spent visiting the displays and artist exhibits throughout downtown State College.

Barley Reports On Survey

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In a recent public opinion survey conducted by Rep. John E. Barley, 65.7 percent of the respondents favored the privatization of the state's liquor sales, while 34.3 percent opposed the idea.

"With the state facing a growing budget deficit, we must look for ways to help cut spending," Barley said. "I have advocated allowing the private sector to take over certain state government operations such as licensing vehicles, prisons and medical assistance.

"By selling the state liquor stores, Pennsylvania will collect between $400 and $650 million," Barley said. "However, the state will maintain strict licensing procedures and enforcement of present laws relating to alcohol sales and distribution."

In regard to the debate on establishing nutrient management regulations for landowners and farmers, nearly 72 percent agreed that the Commonwealth should grant administration of such a program to the Agriculture Department rather than the Department of Environmental Resources (DER).

Barley sponsored House Bill 448, which would give the Agriculture Department oversight of nutrient management programs. The bill has met opposition from House Democrats who are pushing to have the program become part of the DER.

"My concern is that DER is already overloaded in their responsibilities. Additionally, I believe that the Agriculture Department will be more understanding of the problems farmers and landowners face in developing nutrient management plans," Barley said.

A related question showed that 64.2 percent supported the division of DER into separate agencies.

"Many people believe DER has grown beyond control. Presently, DER is responsible for such programs as maintaining the 114 state parks, permitting of storage tanks, and inspecting mining operations," Barley said.

"Some favor dividing the agency into two or more separate agencies, such as the Department of Parks and Recreation and the Department of Environmental Resources."

Additionally, only 46.7 percent believe the state is adequately addressing environmental issues.

Other responses included:

Yes - 68.7; No - 31.3.

— Do you believe the state is doing enough to assist in locating convenient and affordable day care?

Yes - 62.0; No - 38.0.

— Should the state's law regarding the use of radar as a method of speed control be expanded to permit local police departments access to such devices?

Yes - 44.2; No - 55.8.

— Are you satisfied with the state's auto insurance reform law that went into effect on July 1, 1990?

Yes - 55.7; No - 44.3.

— Have you received a reduction in your yearly premium (auto insurance)?

Yes - 65.9; No - 34.1.

Barley said that a total of 2,375 people in the 100th District responded to his survey.

Grazing Of Alfalfa May Prove Beneficial To Farmers

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — Some areas in Pennsylvania and different sections of Maryland — where the land is more rolling — may be more conducive to rotational grazing of alfalfa rather than mechanically harvesting it.

But the farmer who wants to graze alfalfa — which may provide an inexpensive way to harvest hay for high quality forage — must learn new management strategies, according to Dick Kauffman, research agronomist with W-L Research, Inc.

Kauffman is working on a test plot that will study the effects of alfalfa under intense pasture grazing. Varieties will be chosen to see how they endure the stress of stocking and being grazed in a shorter time span than mechanical harvesting.

According to Kauffman, the results can determine a variety to be selected in the future that best suits rotational grazing.

"I have talked to, heard several people talking about, and read some articles about farmers who have done some alfalfa grazing and they feel read good about it,' said Kauffman. "They feel that it's the way to go — you don't need to invest in machinery."

But for farmers to get the most production out of grazing, they have to stock the fields correctly and know how to rotate the cattle on a timely basis. Also, good site selection, where the soil is well drained, fertile, and can withstand grazing is important.

The Mount Joy test site is less than a half acre, but includes several experimental lines of the W-L trifoliate alfalfa (three leaves, with increased protein and other forage nutrient attributes). The company is trying to breed for grazing tolerance, and the site allows them to see the response to varieties and how the stand maintains under grazing pressure.

The company has been exploring grazing varieties for the past 8-10 years, according to Kauffman. Experiments in Argentina, South America — where grazing is the chief method of harvesting alfalfa — have provided some important data about yield selection.

Graze longer

"Most of the alfalfa in Argentina is grazed," said Kauffman. "They graze it rather than spend all the time making hay and storing it. But they don't have the severe winters as we do here in the upper U.S., so they can graze a little longer in the fall."

In Argentina, the alfalfa fields are allowed to recover about one month — the same as the U.S. "They don't feel that it's any more labor intensive to go out there and move cattle around every day than it is to bale hay."

In southeastern Pennsylvania, however, the farms are intensively managed. Many of the farms already have the equipment.

But for farmers starting out, or who do not have the capital and machinery to invest in mechanical harvesting, rotational grazing may be one way to harvest alfalfa.

See how it works

"We want to to see how it works here," said Kauffman. "While we don't think grazing is going to be popular in Lancaster County, there are some places that it will. Most of the cows here aren't even out on pasture — they're in the freestall barn most of the day. But there are some states where farmers do graze their alfalfa, but they're using just a regular alfalfa. We were hoping that we could develop something that's going to persist a little bit better and also produce lots of pounds of beef per acre (or whatever they're grazing)."

Another factor is that, during harvesting, leaves are often lost from the plant. Perhaps, said Kauffman, if the cow or steer is actually grazing the stand, there may be less leaf loss.

Kauffman said he is looking forward to grazing the test plot this year "just to look at the ground after they've grazed to see how much loss there's been," he said. The agronomist will look at factors such as trampling and how the varieties endure the stress of the cattle in the field.

Steers, which W-L examined last year, grazed alfalfa to about 1½ inches in height. Sheep tend to graze it "right against the ground," he said. Cows this year will be looked to see how much alfalfa they graze. The stand recovery period (normally 30-35 days) will be reduced to about 14-21 days to examine the effects of that type of stress on the plant.

Plot seeded

The trial plot was seeded in 1990. The plot will be maintained four years, and then be plowed under and reseeded.

In the meantime, Kauffman will continue to run tests on it, and observe which varieties stand tough.

"Alfalfa will produce fairly well, even under drier conditions," he said. "Whereas cool-season grass production declines in July and August, when temperatures rise and moisture is limiting. Alfalfa's going to hang in there and produce something — at least that's our feeling."

Farmers must be cautious about certain factors if they are going to graze alfalfa, however. One of those concerns is bloat, caused by gases emitted during digestion of alfalfa.

Manage bloat

Kauffman said, "You need to manage bloat — that's always a factor when grazing alfalfa. So either you need to feed them something to prevent bloat, or manage it in such a way that it's not a problem."

Kauffman said that farmers should give the cattle lots of grass — particularlyh dry hay. Mixing the grass seed in with the alfalfa at planting will not be enough, because cattle need the dry grass to absorb the gases. Or farmers can pasture the cattle on grass beforehand.

"Until we have a bloat-resistant alfalfa, farmers are going to need to watch bloat very closely if they are grazing alfalfa," he said.

Kauffman said that if farmers intend to graze alfalfa, several factors should be considered:

- Sow the alfalfa on the kinds of fields that you would normally sow your alfalfa — well-drained, with good soil quality.
- Stock heavily and manage the field intensely, making sure to graze it with intensity. When the stand is grazed to about 1½ inches high, rotate the cattle to another field. Allow the field to recover to next grazing.
- Choose a disease- and insect-resistant variety with adquate grazing capability.
- Manage bloat — either feed a bloat reducer or dry grass hay to the cattle.
- Introduce other elements into the feeding program as well, including total mixed rations, to maintain a healthy dietary balance.
- Read up on the lastest information and keep in touch with your county extension agent on the latest in rotational grazing using alfalfa.

Steers graze an alfalfa plot near Mount Joy. Dick Kauffman, research agronomist with W-L Research, Inc., is working on a test plot that will study the effects of alfalfa under intense pasture grazing. Varieties will be chosen to see how they endure the stress of stocking and being grazed in a shorter time span than mechanical harvesting.

Farmers benefit

Kauffman believes that some farmers can benefit from alfalfa grazing. "I think the possibility is there," he said. "I think that because you don't need to invest in equipment, certainly putting a temporary, movable fence up is a lot cheaper than a hay baler, a couple of wagons, and a tractor."

Kauffman said that for someone who does not want to invest in expensive equipment, "grazing certainly is a lot cheaper than harvesting it for haylage or for baled hay.

"Not to say that grazing is less productive," he said. "Grazing . . . requires much better management. You've got to move your cattle. Whether that's sheep or cows or steers or goats, you've got to move them, and you've got to watch them."

Genesee Country Museum Features Big Wheels

MUMFORD, N. Y. — All kinds of wheels will be featured at Genesee Country Museum on June 8 and June 9 . . .

. . . spinning wheels and carriage wheels, that is.

Located in Mumford, New York, about 20 miles southwest, the Genesee Country Museum is a collection of 57 shops, homes and farm buildings which have been moved to the museum site, arranged in a village setting, restored to their original use and furnished with appropriate antiques.

Costumed interpreters and craftspeople inside most buildings discuss 19th century life and times with visitors.

The museum also features the Gallery of Sporting Art, the largest collection of wildlife art in North America; four gift shops; and the Carriage Museum, a collection of more than 40 antique carriages and sleighs.

Saturday's "Spin-In," centered in the museum's Exhibition Hall, will see over 100 spinners and weavers demonstrate the 19th century art of spinning wool on a wide variety of wheels, then weaving that wool into sturdy, warm fabric.

Several regional sheep-to-shawl teams will engage in friendly competition to determine how quickly they can take a pile of raw wool, card it, tease it, spin it and weave it into a shawl, 18 inches wide by 80 inches long.

A local sheep shearer, Dan Swartz, will demonstrate how the whole process begins by shearing a sheep every hour on the hour, beginning at 11 a.m.

A variety of spinning-oriented items will be offered for sale by area vendors including natural yarns, sheepskin, dyes, spindles, angora goat and sheephorn buttons and niddy-noddys.

Music to spin by will be provided by the Bushnell's Basin Delegation, beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Sunday, June 9, will see dozens of wheels attached to antique carriages as they drive through the streets of the museum's historic village and test the ability of horse and driver alike in competition on the Great Meadow.

The day begins early with a pleasure drive through the countryside surrounding the village museum.

Then, beginning about 11 a.m., the drivers will finish the timed competition by driving through the streets of the museum's historic village. Many visitors take this opportunity to photograph the restored carriages against the backdrop of the restored buildings in the 19th century village.

In early afternoon, competition will begin in rings set up on the museum's Great Meadow.

The competitions will include "Fault and Out" and "Gambler's Choice" and are designed to test the skill and patience of both horse and driver.

Total points from all three events will be tallied and the entry with the highest score will receive the Dr. William Howe Memorial Trophy. Dr. Howe was an enthusiastic supporter of Genesee Country Museum and the events which centered around horses.

All events of each day of the weekend are included in the regular museum admission of $9 for adults, $6 for youth 13 through 17; and $4.50 for children six through 12.

Children five and under and museum members are admitted at no charge.

The museum opens at 10 a.m. and closes at 5 p.m. every weekend throughout the season. Weekday hours are 10 a.m. until 4 p.m., Tuesday through Friday, in May, June, September and October and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, in July and August.

There are two restaurants in operation on the museum site, and picnic tables are available at no charge. Parking is abundant and free.

Horst Auction Center Opens

At the Horst Auction Center open house last Sunday afternoon, 1,100 people came to see the new facility and greet the Horst family auction team.

"We were really pleased with the turn-out," said Glenn Horst. "We appreciate all our friends who came to see us."

During the four-hour event, the display area was set full of rare antiques in preparation for the first auction scheduled for Wednesday evening.

MEF Extends Branded Products Promotion

DENVER, Colo. — The U.S. Meat Export Federation (MEF) recently announced that it would accept proposals for its Branded Products Promotion Program under the new USDA Marketing Promotion Program (MPP).

The Branded Products Promotion Program is separate and distinct from those previously conducted. In a previous announcement, MEF announced that activities conducted under this program had to be completed by September 30, 1991; however, the new Branded Products Promotion Program year will be extended to March 31, 1992, effective for this allocation only.

The program year was extended because funding for the Branded Products Promotion Program will come from the new MPP. MPP is the successor to the TEA program, which expired with the 1985 Farm Bill.

In the Branded Products Promotion Program, MEF will match funds with U.S. companies that wish to conduct overseas promotions for their products. Branded products promotions may be conducted in any country in the world designated as an export market for U.S. products. This does not include U.S. territories or Canada.

Allocations will be based upon the effectiveness of the company's proposed activities and adherence to USDA/Foreign Agriculture Service (FAS) regulations, and $1,000,000 will be available for distribution to companies.

Companies that apply to MEF will be charged a 5 percent submission fee for participation in the program. This fee is based upon the total amount of award received through MEF. The fee is nonrefundable and is not prorated if the company does not spend the full level of its award. The deadline for submission of proposals is April 30, 1991.

Companies wishing to participate in this program should be aware that the USDA has not yet finalized regulations for the MPP program. MEF will use the current TEA guidelines for content of proposals and determination of reimbursable costs; however, any change in USDA regulations may require that companies submit additional information to retain their eligibility for the program.

Companies interested in the program should contact Barbara Watson at (303) 399-7151 for guidelines and proposal format.

Lawmakers Propose Grant Program For Rural Youth

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On Monday, state Rep. Kenneth Cole, chairman of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, and state Rep. Samuel Hayes, of Blair County, announced proposed legislation that would establish a grant program for rural youth.

The legislation would use funds made available through federal sources which are allocated to a restricted account, representing the remaining assets of the defunct Pennsylvania Rural Rehabilitation Corporation.

Under the program, grants to individual chapters of qualifying organizations are to range from $2,500 to $15,000, depending on the project for which the grant is to be used.

Some of the types of projects outlined by Rep. Cole as targeted for support through the grant program include educational seminars; seminars and field trips; special projects; agricultural safety training; and certain capital projects and equipment purchases.

An 11-member board, to be chaired by the state secretary of agriculture would administer the grant program.

The grant program is designed for, but not restricted to, rural youth organizations such as 4-H and FFA.

"These organizations have scraped along, funded through membership fees, fundraising efforts, and private donations," Cole said. "They receive limited funding each year from our agricultural fair program, but it's a very small amount in comparison to all they do.

"The Agriculture and Rural Youth Development Act will provide a steady and dependable source of funding for organizations in this state that help young people in our agricultural and rural communities."

In addition to the two legislators, a number of youth were present during the press conference and testified as to the worth of rural youth development programs and the need for assistance.

Those present representing 4-H were Abe Bucher, Amy Miller, Amy Cunningham, Travis Green, Mandy Hilbert, Debbie Wilkinson, Doris Wilkinson, Brandy Carey, Mary Beth Stahl, Tonyia Washburn, Beau Ramsburg, Melanie Kuntz and Maribel Gabrielson.

According to Cole, the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee will be discussing the bill soon.

"With just a little seed money, the commonwealth can support millions of dollars worth of privately funded efforts by Pennsylvania youth organizations.

"I think this is a worthy goal, and I think most of my colleagues will agree, because the long term benefits of this program will show up in communities and on farms across our state."

State Rep. Kenneth Cole, D-Adams County, announces proposed legislation to create a grant program for rural youth. Standing behind Cole, and also supporting the legislation is Rep. Samuel Hayes, R-Blair County. A number of rural youth also are on stage in support of the legislation.

Berks Co. Farm Directory Under Way

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Farm producers can now list foods grown for direct sale to consumers in the 1991 "Fresh From Berks County Farms" directory.

"Many farms last year benefited from the popular directory, which was printed in an area newspaper and was used as a handout to consumers," said L. Jeffrey Patton, Lehigh Co. marketing agent.

Patton said that farmers must fill out a form, available from the Berks Co. Extension Office, P.O. Box 520, Leesport, PA 19533, (215) 378-1327. There is no fee.

Types of farms that can be listed include those growing vegetables, potatoes and herbs; milk and dairy products; chicken, turkey, and eggs; small fruits, tree fruits, and cider; beef, pork, lamb, wool, and fish; and wine, honey, baked goods, and other farm-made foods.

Also, other items such as pumpkins, bedding and potted plants, farm tours, hay, and Christmas trees can also be listed in the directory.

"The intent of 'Fresh From Berks County Farms' is to show where consumers can find farm-fresh products," said Patton. "This directory excludes those who don't consider themselves 'farm producers,' such as garden centers, gardeners, and non-farming produce or meat vendors."

Those who need more information can contact Patton at (215) 391-9840.

It's hard to make milk with poor quality forages. If in doubt, look how well cows milked in the 1990-91 feeding season, compared to the 1989-90 season. The big difference was the superior quality of forage produced in 1990; it improved production by as much as 10 lbs. of milk per cow per day.

Good quality forage is essential for efficient milk production and good herd health. Because it is higher in digestible fiber, it improves dry matter intake and milk production. The rumen functions properly and fat tests are more normal. Cows stay in better flesh and breed back sooner. The digestibility of the entire ration is improved, enabling cows to make better use of the feeds they consume, and helping to reduce feed costs per cwt. of milk produced.

What you do at harvest time has a tremendous impact on forage quality and herd profits for the next year. Once the forage is in storage you are stuck with whatever quality you put up for a long period of time, unless you remove the forage and replace it with something else.

Our challenge is to grow, harvest, preserve and feed the kind and quality of forage cows need. Select the kind of crops you need for your feeding program, and then select the crop varieties and hybrids that have good fiber digestibility.

As you harvest forage crops, keep in mind, the nutrients that are most digestible and the most soluble are the nutrients that are of greatest value to cows. They are also the nutrients most apt to be lost at harvest time as a result of plant cell respiration, leaching that is caused by exposure to the weather, leaf shatter, and the heat of fermentation. Once these nutrients are lost at harvest time and in storage, they are no longer available to cows.

The First Cutting Challenge

One of the most important factors affecting forage quality is stage of maturity at time of cutting. For alfalfa, aim for the bud to early bloom stage. However, the best guideline for harvesting first cuttings might be to harvest them as soon as you get the first good break in weather. Many years, that might be the only good break in weather you'll get in May. Study long range weather forecasts carefully and be ready to cut as soon as the weather breaks -- not a day or two after. This might dictate a temporary delay in corn planting, but once the first cutting is made you can resume corn planting with the satisfaction of knowing that your second cutting is growing as you plant and that you've probably set the stage for harvesting an extra cutting for the season.

Respiration Losses

Plant cell respiration continues from the time the plant is cut until it drys down to about 40% moisture. The longer it takes for the crop to dry down to this level, the greater the loss of feed nutrients.

For quickest dry down, cut early in the morning in order to take full advantage of daylight drying hours soon after cutting. Condition the hay, either mechanically or chemically, and let it dry in the swath or in a light, fluffy windrow.

Leaching Losses

Soluble nutrients are leached out when hay is exposed to the weather. Quick dry down, as discussed earlier, plus harvesting at higher levels of moisture gets the crop off the field sooner. This can be accomplished by harvesting the crop at about 45-60% moisture as haylage, or by using a hay preservative to permit baling hay at 22-30% moisture.

Leaf Shatter

Most of the digestible nutrients of plants are found in the leaves. Leaf shatter increases when hay is raked and baled at moisture levels less than about 22%. To reduce these losses, let hay wilt down in the swath to about 30-50% moisture. Then rake the hay into light, fluffy windrows and let it finish drying in the windrow. Bale at about 22% moisture. With the proper use of preservatives, hay can be baled up to about 30% moisture. If the hay gets too dry, delay baling until the evening hours when it picks up some additional moisture.

Heating

Valuable energy and dry matter are consumed when hay heats in the mow, or when haylage undergoes fermentation. When temperatures become excessive, some of the protein gets bound to the fiber and becomes unavailable to the cow. There is also risk of spontaneous combustion and the formation of toxic molds and mycotoxins. These losses can be reduced by baling at lower moisture levels, which increases leaf shatter, or by the proper use of hay preservatives and silage additives.

Fermentation Problems

Having to feed out a silo full of badly femmented, poor quality forage can be a very costly experience from the standpoint of poor milk production, DA's, poor conception, foot problems and high cow tumover, etc. It's a nightmare that no dairyman wants to experience. One solution is to haul the bad silage to the field and replace it with better quality feed, which is also expensive. Another better altemative is to prevent the problem from happening by using proper ensiling techniques, and then supporting these efforts with the proper use of a good silage additive.

Proper ensiling techniques for haylage include: ensiling the crop at the right moisture level (about 45-60%), chopping at the proper length (about 3/8- 1/2 in.), storing it in an air-tight structure, filling the structure rapidly, distributing it well for even packing, and then protecting it from oxygen infiltration.

Legumes are not the easiest crop to ensile. Compared to corn, which is an easy crop to ensile, legumes are higher in protein and lower in energy and contain less lactobacillus bacteria. For silage and haylage to be preserved well, lactobacillus bacteria need to be present and they need energy (soluble carbohydrates) to feed upon in order to produce the lactic acid that is needed to drop the pH to about 4.5 to "pickle" the silage.

The higher protein content of legumes acts as a buffer, making it more difficult for the pH to drop to the desired levels. Legumes are also somewhat lower in energy to begin with. The loss of soluble carbohydrates in the field, due to respiration and leaching, means there is even less soluble carbohydrates available to support the fermentation process. This can lead to inadequate femmentation, poor preservation, and poor quality haylage.

The proper use of a silage additive, one that contains a lactobacillus culture plus enzymes, can help ensure a good fermentation. Follow instructions closely. In addition to supplying sufficient numbers of the right kind of bacteria, the enzymes in the additive can help break down the less digestible fiber in the plant, thereby releasing additional energy for the fermentation process. As the enzymes break down the fiber, they also tend to improve the digestibility of the forage.

Storing Feeds for Greater Accessibility

Being able to access whatever feeds you want, when you want them, is of great benefit when you are trying to do a good job of feeding cows. Thus, it is beneficial to store feeds of similar kind and quality together, in the same silo if possible. Feeds of questionable quality should be stored separately, perhaps in a bag or stack, so they can be used to best advantage, with minimal adverse affect on the herd. When building new feed storage facilities, it might be more advantageous to build two smaller units rather than one larger unit in order to have more flexibility in managing feed inventories.

Feeding cows properly can be a challenge. Good quality forages make the job much easier. Within our grasp are many opportunities for doing a good job of putting up good quality forages that can be used in our dairy rations. Our challenge is to recognize these opportunities and to take full advantage of them when they arrive, and harvest time is a good time to start.

New Dairy Organization Starts, Goal Is Social Interaction

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — A new statewide social organization is being formed for people with an interest in dairy cattle.

It's called the Pennsylvania Young Dairymen's Organization, and it's being formed under the sponsorship of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association.

The only restriction is that members must be between the ages of 20 and 40.

"The only qualification is a sincere interest in the Holstein or dairy cattle industry in general," said Mary Ann Keith, one of the founders.

There are no dues. There are no membership cards. In fact, there is little evidence that an organization has already started, except for two meetings already planned.

According to Keith, the purpose of the organization is fun and fellowship.

The organization is to be statewide. And anyone can go to any event occuring in any other part of the state. However, for practicality, the existing regional divisions of the Holstein Association are being applied.

The South-Central District Young Dairymen's Organization is holding a picnic for any dairymen or dairy industry-related people starting 11:30 a.m., June 9, at Logan Bower's Farm in Blain.

Dairy farm families from Adams, Cumberland, Dauphin, Franklin, Lancaster, Lebanon, Perry, and York counties are invited to attend and are asked to bring a picnic dish to pass around and to bring table service. A $5 donation per family is being asked to cover the cost of beverage and meat.

A number of activities are planned and there will be an opportunity to view Bower's dairy operation as well as visit with fellow dairy families and industry people.

Also scheduled, in the Central District, on May 18, is a meeting at the home farm of Dr. David Morrow, who lives in Centre County.

Keith said suggestions for meetings and activities are being sought. "Some of the suggestions for meetings include farm tours and demonstrations, picnics, game nights, and bowling nights."

Keith said she is excited about getting things going and offers an open invitation to all (20 to 40 years old) who are interested.

"If you are interested in becoming a part of this young organization, we are interested in having you," she said.

PDA Publishes Farm Vacation Guide

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A working farm is a wonderful place for a family to spend vacation time. In addition to the scenic beauty many farms offer, visitors can learn more about Pennsylvania agriculture, the state's number one industry.

The Department of Agriculture has just published its 1991 Pennsylvania Farm Vacation Guide, listing the names, locations and other information about farms that accommodate tourists.

There are 39 vacation farms located throughout Pennsylvania with activities that include swimming and hiking, horseback riding and pony rides, volleyball and horseshoes, and hunting and fishing. The hosts often encourage visitors to learn about their farm operation and help feed the small animals.

Some of the farms are open all year, offering winter activities like ice skating, cross country skiing, tobogganing and sleigh rides.

Individual accommodations and rates vary from farm to farm. Guests will find rooms in old restored farmhouses and colonial mansions, or rustic cabins and primitive camping. Home style country cooking is often part of the vacation package. Local tourist attractions, county fairs, farm markets and historical sites are only a short drive from many of the farms.

For a free copy of the directory, send a stamped, self-addressed business size envelope to: Pennsylvania Farm Vacations, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408.

On-Farm Manufacturer Finds International Markets

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.)—The next patio you walk on or the new molding around your door may be a reincarnation of some used plastic milk containers. This will be so, if John and Amos Lapp, Ken Nolt and the crews at Quality Fencing and Supply, Inc., located north of New Holland, have their way.

From Re-Source Lumber, Ltd., with offices in Quebec, Canada, and Elgin, Illinois, a new product has entered the building market in the East. Recycled plastic milk containers are ground into flakes or pelleted and then extruded into various sizes of lumber. In the process, various colors such as weathered redwood, cedar, brown, black, white and blue are added and different shapes from 3/4" x 51/2" planks to tongue and groove boards, dowels and moldings are made.

"This new wood lumber substitute has exceptional resistance to weathering, moisture and cracking," Nolt said. "It is ideal for porches because it doesn't need to be painted or replaced from rot every few years."

Quality Fencing started 10 years ago on the farm where a dog kennels was established. John designed the fencing for the kennels. Requests soon came for the same kind of fencing to be built for other people. This was the start of the chain link fencing division of the company. Last year, this division was moved to a neighboring farm under Amos's direction. Around the farm, chain link fencing is especially useful to protect manure storage areas.

Over the years, PVC fencing has become the trademark of the company. The extruded panels and tubes are purchased from the factory, but the many items such as hot house piant boxes, pasture fences, picket fencing for yards, and lawn benches, are manufactured on the farm. These items are usually constructed from wood and take a lot of maintenance. But the PVC items need no painting and are just as strong as wood. If a horse or steer pushes against the fence, it has some elasticity and will often spring back into place. If the PVC fence is broken, the same damage would also have occurred with a wooden fence.

Many of the manufacturing machines used by Quality Fencing to construct their products were designed by John and Amos Lapp. The ingenuity inherent in the machinery and systems in this small manufacturing plant on a farm are fascinating.

The company looks to their three lines of of products to carry them in their future business: the chain link fence for construction on rural and urban properties; the PVC products for national and world-wide distribution; and the lumber made from milk containers to supply to the construction industry.

In 10 years, Quality Fencing has come from dog kennels to an on-the-farm manufacturer and world-wide distributor of quality PVC fencing and other fine products. And business continues to expand.

A fence manufacturing operation replaced dogs and chickens on this Lancaster County farm.

30 YEARS AGO
THIS WEEK

-Milk sales in gallon jugs have been legal in Pennsylvania for several years, but establishments to make the sales have been very scarce.

Sales of the white liquid in the Lititz area will get a boost next week with the opening of a new bulk salesroom.

Mr. Neil Clark, who operates two retail routes in and around Lititz, will begin sales of milk in gallon containers within the next few days.

Milk has been sold at retail from Spruce Villa since 1905 when the father of the present operator, Milton Brubaker went from door to door with a horse and wagon and sold milk from cans.

Later, with the addition of pasteurizing, homogenizing, and bottling equipment and a large herd, the business expanded to the two routes of today.

Shooting for an opening date of May 15, Clark is looking for an enlarged consumption of milk. Since all the milk sold in bulk must be produced on the farm, expansion of the herd is a possible outcome of the whole program.

"We will continue with the retail routes just as we have been in the past," Clark said this week, "but if anyone wants to drive out to the farm to take advantage of the wholesale price of milk in bulk, we will be glad to serve them."

-Three adult leaders and two junior leaders were elected by the New Holland 4-H Community Club at their May 8 meeting. Two members were also elected to represent the club on the 4-H county council.

Adult leaders are: John Eby, Gordonville R1; Earl Fisher, New Holland, and John B. Lapp. Bareville.

J. David Lapp and Roy Mentzer were named junior leaders at the meeting in the New Holland Bank Building. Mentzer and Elvin Hess are the new county council members.

The club will visit Hubbard's Hatchery at their next meeting.

-Willim Maule, Quarryville R2, was elected Tuesday evening to represent the Kirkwood community 4-H club on the Lancaster County Council.

The third meeting of the group, held in the Bart-Colerain Elementary School, was attended by 30 members and seven adults.

During the program, a demonstration on gardening was given, after which A. G. Lueck, assistant county agent, spoke more thoroughly on the subject.

Martin Greenlead, Jr., is news reporter for the club.

-H. R. Ferguson, Kirkwood, PA, is the owner of six registered Guernseys that have recently completed official DHIA production records. Walnut Grove Dixie F., an eight year old, produced 12,710 lbs. of milk and 628 lbs. of fat; Walnut Grove Barons Betty, a five year old, produced 8,590 pounds of milk and 522 pounds of fat.

-The organizational meeting of the Manheim Township 4-H Merry Stitchers was held recently at the home of Susan and Jeanne Hess, 1860 Harrington Drive, Lancaster. Seventeen members were present.

The following officers were elected: president, Patsy Long; vice president, Susan Hess; secretary, Phyllis Bryson; treasurer, Nancy Rohrer; songleader, Marian Landis; game leaders, Ann Landis and Jeanne Hess, and news reporter, Averril Royer. Nancy Rohrer was elected as County 4-H Council member.

Local leaders of the club are Mrs. Herbert Royer, Mrs. John Hess, Mrs. Robert Bryam and Mrs. Robert Eby.

Mothers On The Farm Reflect On Greatest Challenge

Sharon B. Schu
Maryland Correspondent

Whether they raise cows or sheep, whether they are on a farm of 10 acres or 1000 acres, mothers on the farm face the same challenge as mothers everywhere — finding enough time to spend with their children.

Farm mothers from New York to Virginia and points in between, were asked "what is the greatest challenge to you as a mother on the farm in the 1990s?"

Their children were also asked to describe their mother in just three words. Here is what mom and kids had to say.

Donna Myers
New Windsor, Maryland

Donna Myers lives on the 150-acre Windsor Manor Farm in New Windsor, Maryland, where she and her husband, Jason, and their two daughters milk 60 cows. They raise hay and small grains to feed their herd of 125 cows, and have lived in their historic stone farmhouse for the past seven years.

"I don't think we are any different than any other mothers in the fact that because of economics, all mothers are busy. We all have to make sure our children come first, when our lives are so busy. Being on the farm, I can make my schedule adapt — that's a real benefit."

Donna's daughters, Kelly, 13, and Kristin, 10, said their mother is "considerate, kind and working."

Carmen Griffin and her daughters Bobbi, 9, and Jaeme, 11, take a break at the Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival. They raise sheep, llamas, and dogs at their New Jersey Farm in Pine Ridge.

Donna Myers sits on the porch swing of their historic family home on Windsor Manor Farm with daughters, Kristin and Kelly. "Darlene (the dog) thinks she is my third daughter," said Donna.

Carmen Griffin
Whitehouse Station
New Jersey

Carmen and Charles Griffin and their daughters, Jaeme Lee, 11, and Bobbi Ellen, 9, run 60 head of sheep on two farms. They raise Tunis and Romney sheep, llamas and Maremma guard dogs on their Pine Ridge Farm.

Carmen said her greatest challenge is "spreading my time — giving equal time to children, animals and the house (usually last in the priorities). The kids do a lot, and they are starting to know more than I do as to what to select for show stock."

Jaeme and Bobbi characterized their mother with these three words — "determined, busy, energetic."

Pat Lehmkuhl
Real Retreat, Virginia

At Thistletown Farm in Virginia, Pat Lehmkuhl works at her on-farm gallery where she turns out beautiful original oil paintings with a pastoral theme. With 35 sheep and three children, Holly, Jason and Nathan, she has a full schedule.

Pat said that "having enough time to be artistic and work with the sheep" is a challenge to her. She is pleased that daughter, Holly, 13, has "shown an interest in wool and spinning, and I need more time to develop these interests."

Holly said her mom is "nice, caring, and friendly."

Kathy Patrick
Woodbine, Maryland

Kathy Patrick is part of the Maple Dell Farm operation which involves 1000 acres. She and her husband, Mike, and their three daughters, Becky, 12, Nicole, 10, and Missy, 8, milk 200 cows. The girls are the fourth generation of Patricks to continue the dairying tradition at Maryland Maple Dell.

Kathy said that she feels challenged to "teach these guys responsibility, what the farm is about, and where it came from. I want them to understand and appreciate the hard work of generations before them, and to have the same love of the land that their father, grandfather and great-grandfather had."

The girls said they appreciate the fact that their mom "lets us do things like mow the lawn," and also characterized her as "capable and strong."

Sarah Hafensteiner
Selkirk, New York

The Hafensteiners raise natural-colored sheep on their 92-acre Flemish Bond Farm, 12 miles south of Albany, New York. Sarah and her husband, Marc, have four children, Benjamin, 10, Jacob, 7, Sam, 4, and Abigail, 2.

Sarah said that finding "enough time in order to do all the work of a farm and that kids require," is her greatest challenge. She also wants to "find a way to allow the children to be involved and spark their interest, without overwhelming them and scaring them away from it because of the amount of work."

Sharon Rinehart
Taneytown, Maryland

Sharon Rinehart is mother to four daughters ranging in age from 18 years to 18 months. This busy mom is also mother to the Maryland Farm Queen, Jenell Rinehart. Sharon and John's other daughters are Jeena, 8, Jeanae, 3, and Jodee, the baby. On 400 acres that comprise Rinehart Farms, Sharon and her family milk 55 cows. The girls are fourth generation on this family farm.

Sharon Rinehart said her greatest challenge as a farm mother is "teaching high ethics and morals. Our kids have so much responsibility. We try to teach them to have high morals to cope with all the responsibilities. I want to teach my kids that you have to work hard, have respect, and be dedicated, and you have to be self-motivated. We are preparing them for life — they live with stress every day. They are too busy to get into trouble."

The Maryland Farm Queen, Jenell, described her mother as "dedicated — it's hard to juggle a household and the farm, giving — she never hesitates to help any of us kids, and loving."

Geneva Welch
Flint Hill, Virginia

Geneva Welch lives with her family on 97 acres in Virginia. She has started a small herd of Scotch Highland cattle and pursues her full-time career as an artist in a converted stone barn studio. Her popular watercolor paintings depict cows, sheep and life. Popular country music performer, Randy Travis, recently purchased three of her Holstein cow paintings. Geneva is kept busy with her painting, the cows, and two kids, Ryan, 17 and Courtney, 13.

"As kids get older, they need you more," said Geneva. "Keeping up with teenagers is a new challenge, a real eye-opener. And now that they are older and have new interests, I have an extended family of cats and dogs."

Courtney paid her mother the highest of compliments, calling her "understanding, loving and wonderful."

Mother's Day is a special time for those who are mothers, those who have mothers, and those who love someone who is "just like a mother."

Happy Mother's Day to moms everywhere, on the farm and in town. And best of luck to mothers who are trying to meet that greatest of challenges — to find enough time for their kids.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

Meatballs have always been an easy and economical dish to make. Now with your microwave oven, cooking meatballs is also quick and convenient. Here are some hints for success and two delicious recipes for you to try.

First the meat. For meatballs, extra lean ground beef (about 82 percent to 86 percent lean), gives good results. The other added ingredients, such as liquid (eggs, milk, etc.) and starch (crumbs, oatmeal, etc.) help keep the meat juicy and tender. Meatballs made with regular ground beef, sometimes labeled hamburger, (about 70 percent to 76 percent lean) shrink and produce extra fat to drain off. (For microwaved hamburgers and casseroles, I prefer lean ground beef — about 77 percent to 81 percent lean — because it gives juicier results — especially with burgers.)

Other ground meats can be used in meatballs. Ground pork is at least 70 percent lean and contains no seasonings. Usually it's sold fresh at the meat counter. Ground turkey is found fresh in large supermarkets or frozen in smaller stores. Ground chicken (frozen), combinations of ground pork and turkey (frozen), and combinations of beef and pork are also available in some supermarkets.

All work well in meatballs. However, meatballs made with all-turkey, lighter color meats, or combinations need some paprika (or other dark seasoning) added before cooking, or a colorful sauce stirred in after cooking to make them look appealing. In addition, meatballs made with ground turkey or chicken can taste "boiled," yet dried-out. To prevent this, microwave poultry meatballs uncovered until they are no longer pink, but are well-done.

I've done a lot of experimenting lately with combinations of ground meats. My favorite combination is: one-half pound each extra lean ground beef, lean ground pork and ground turkey. My next favorite, which contains less fat than the first, but still ends up juicy and tender, is: three-fourths pound lean ground beef and one-fourth pound ground turkey.

Mix and shape the ground meat mixture thoroughly but gently. Use a fork or your hands to mix it so the seasonings are evenly combined. Don't use a heavy hand or beat the mixture. Shape the mixture into balls by gently forming, rather than pushing the mixture together into tightly-packed perfectly-round balls. Gentle mixing and shaping leads to tender, juicy meatballs. Tough handling, plus overcooking, or not enough liquid in the uncooked mixture, will give hard-as-bullets meatballs. This is especially true with very lean meat, like ground turkey or even extra lean ground beef.

Meatballs cook fastest and most evenly in a single layer. Therefore, a flat dish is best, such as an 8x8-inch dish for a pound of meat or an 8x12-inch dish for 1½ pounds. To cover, used waxed paper or the new Microwave Wrap. They hold in some heat and promote even cooking, without steaming.

Small meatballs cook faster than large ones. You may want to drain regular ground beef. With lean ground beef, lean ground pork or ground turkey, the small amount of fat and juices add flavor to the meat, so usually are not discarded.

Meatballs should be turned over and rearranged so less-done ones in the dish center are moved to the outside edges and vice versa. Do this about half-way through cooking.

Barbecued Mexican Meatballs

1½ pounds extra lean ground beef*
¾ cup quick oatmeal (not instant)
1 whole egg
¼ cup finely chopped onion
2 to 4 tablespoons (½ to 1 two-ounce can) chopped green chilis, undrained
2 teaspoons chili powder
1 teaspoons cumin
½ teaspoons salt (optional)
1⅓ cup prepared barbecue sauce
⅔ cup thick, chunky prepared mild salsa
½ to ¾ cup black olives

Place ground beef, oatmeal, egg, onions and chilis in a mixing bowl; sprinkle with chili powder, cumin and salt, if used. Mix gently, with a fork or hands until well combined. Gently shape mixture into about 30 meatballs. Place in microwavable 8x12 or 9x13-inch dish; cover with waxed paper or microwave paper. Microwave (High) 4 minutes; turn meatballs over and rearrange so less-cooked ones are to outside edges of dish. Re-cover and continue microwaving (High) 3 to 5 minutes or until meatballs are no longer pink. Drain, if necessary.

Stir together barbecue sauce, salsa and olives; add to meatballs. Cover with waxed paper or microwave paper. Microwave (High) 3 to 4 minutes, stirring once, or until hot. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

To reheat: (For best flavor for this and other meatball recipes, make ahead, refrigerate and reheat.) Cover dish with waxed paper; microwave (High) 4 to 6 minutes, stirring once, until hot.

Each serving — ⅙ th of recipe: 271 calories, 19g protein, 18g fat, 10g carbohydrate, 693mg sodium, 82mg cholesterol.

* Or use a combination of ground meats, such as beef, pork and turkey.

Stroganoff Meatballs

1 pound extra lean ground beef*
½ cup finely chopped onion
½ cup fine dry bread or cracker crumbs
½ cup milk
1 envelope (1.5 ounces) stroganoff sauce mix, divided
½ teaspoon salt (optional)
⅛ teaspoon ground pepper
1 can (10¾ ounces) "light" cream of mushroom soup
¾ cup low fat dairy sour cream
1 can (4 ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Chopped fresh parsley (optional)

Place ground beef, onion, crumbs and milk in a mixing bowl; sprinkle with half of stroganoff sauce mix, salt, if used and pepper. Mix gently, with a fork or hands until well combined. Shape mixture into 16 to 20 meatballs. Place in microwavable 8x8 or 7x11-inch dish; cover with waxed paper or microwave paper. Microwave (High) 3 minutes; turn meatballs over and rearrange so less-cooked ones are to outside edges of dish. Re-cover and continue microwaving (High) 2 to 3 minutes or until meatballs are no longer pink. Drain, if necessary.

In a separate bowl, stir together soup, sour cream, mushrooms, Worcestershire sauce mix and remaining stroganoff sauce mix. Stir soup mixture into meatballs; cover with waxed paper or microwave paper. Microwave (High) 4 to 6 minutes, stirring twice, or until hot. If desired, sprinkle with chopped fresh parsley before serving. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

It's a boy. And a girl. And a boy .... and a girl .... and another .... Well, we're not sure exactly what it is. Or, what they are, to be more correct.

But, let me back up.

At 7 a.m. last Friday morning, our son glanced out the back door window and made the announcement we've been awaiting for several weeks.

"The baby geese are going in the water!"

Sure enough, with both mama and papa Canada geese coaxing from the water just off the wooden edge of our mid-pond nesting "island," one little gosling hopped off the edge. And another. And another and another, until five little bodies bobbed around.

Those five small balls of yellowish-brown fuzz paddled their little legs furiously, keeping pace with the effortless glide of the adult pair. A chilly wind whipped the steely-gray pond waters on this morning, sending dark clouds eastward to threaten the sun's attempts to warm the day.

But the coolness of the early hour and downright cold temperatures of the pond were no deterrent to the little flotilla, circling the pond awash in obvious parental pride. It almost seemed the pair was parading their accomplishment around their neighborhood - a sort of goose good-news proclamation.

That this pair of geese chose to return to our pond for a second season was a source of tremendous satisfaction for us. And, we know it's at least the same male because of the distinctive sprinkling of white feathers among the sleek black coloring of his head.

Though we nearly dumped the canoe into the icy drink last spring, the nesting "island" we maneuvered midpond had promptly been claimed by the pair of nesters. A wooden-pallet floor, fastened at each corner to one of four posts driven into the pond bottom, was just large enough for a spacious nest and a sort of porch on opposite sides.

The Farmer added a roof overhead - not necessarily according to wildlife nest-building recommendations - but apparently appreciated by the geese. They fought off every other feathered being that made even an attempt to land, and eventually hatched out and protectively nurtured one very fast-growing baby.

This season was a repeat, with the male chasing off all other geese, along with threatening every tractor and truck that drove by the pond.

But, for whatever reason, this year he chose to tolerate ducks. Two mallard males cruise the pond regularly, though the females have disappeared to nest in the meadow. A pair of ring-necked ducks paused briefly along their migration to northern summer homes.

And this year's feather-in-the-cap, er, pond, is a pair of wood ducks. If there are clowns in the duck world, wood ducks would have to qualify. While the females are fairly somber in striped brown hues, the males flaunt coloring of iridescent blue, purple, brown and a green head with duck-tail-hairdo, all accented with outlines of white. Stunning.

Even more astounding was watching them nest-scout, the male pacing around the chimney of our old springhouse, while the female checked out the pondside willow. Ducks in tree? And chimneys? According to the field guides, wood ducks nest in hollow tree cavities as high as 50 feet up, with the babies jumping to the ground after hatching. Ouch!

Other chores were briefly abandoned that morning to erect impromptu wood duck nestboxes - in the pond and 10 feet up in the willow.

After a brief swim around the pond, our mama goose herded her brood back to the nest for a warming nap. Papa kept vigil from the nest porch, flaring at the manure truck each time it rumbled past.

Somehow it seems fitting that we should salute mothers at this time of year when new life is so abundant and nurturing instincts so visible.

So, to mothers, who nurture and nest, cherish and chide, direct and delight us, for giving us the best gift ever - love - we say THANKS!

PDPP Takes Cheers To School

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — During this season of proms and graduations, the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program (PDPP) and Pennsylvania dairy farmers are providing parents and students a sensible way to conduct their celebrations.

To date, more than 100 Pennsylvania secondary schools will be incorporating the CHEERS Non-Alcoholic Dairy Beverage Program into their springtime parties.

"We recognize that parents and students are concerned about drinking and driving," said Brian Ross, PDPP program manager. "Our board members and other dairy farmers are likewise concerned about the safety of today's youth. The PDPP established CHEERS last year to offer a party program that uses healthy dairy beverages and eliminates the use of alcohol."

Every year, thousands of individuals are fatally injured in alcohol-related automobile accidents. Many of these accidents occur during the spring when young people are out at prom or graduation parties. Too often, high school students use alcohol because it makes their party more sociable.

CHEERS takes that social aura, removes the alcohol, and adds nutrition and safety to the party mix. The program offers recipes for Grasshoppers, White Russians, Strawberry Daiquiri's, and Orange Blossoms, which are made with milk, ice cream, and other dairy products.

"Since Pennsylvania is ranked fifth nationally in the production of dairy products, we felt that Pennsylvanians could respond to the prom and graduation safety issue by offering nutritious dairy beverages," said Ross. "The PDPP is proud to be able to provide students and parents this healthy and safe alternative to their celebrations."

The CHEERS program provides each school a party pack, which includes napkins, recipe brochures, table tents, stickers, and banners. In addition, schools that serve CHEERS beverages at their parties can send a polaroid or 35 mm picture of their party display to the PDPP and receive a $35 reimbursement for their rental equipment and beverage expenses.

There's nothing like a home-made meal to brighten the day for your mother. Why wrestle with restaurant crowds when your mother would probably prefer that you make her favorite dishes — a sure tribute to show that your mother taught you how to be a good cook.

And, while you may insist that no one can surpass your mother's cooking, try these recipes. You may be surprised. But how would you ever know unless you put these recipes to the test.

Salted Mackeral

Use fish as fresh as possible. Split or filet fish to get all the blood out from under the spine. Rinse quickly and pat dry. Put a layer of filets in a pickling crock and cover with a layer of coarse salt. Continue to layer with plenty of salt and end with a thick layer of salt.

After a few days, the salt will draw all the liquid from the fish. The fish can remain in the brine for several weeks.

ANSWER — Mary Miklarcis, of Thompson, Ohio, requested recipes for a Mock Pecan Pie that is made with pinto beans; a fruit cake made with Jack Daniels, and Washington Pie Squares that the bakeries used to sell for five cents during the Depression. Thanks to Cheryl Pinkerton, Leonardtown, Md., and to anonymous contributor for sending in the following.

Mock Pumpkin Pie Made With Kidney Beans

15½ -ounce can of kidney beans, drained
12-ounce can evaporated milk
2 eggs
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 9-inch unbaked pie shell

Combine all ingredients and mix at medium high speed in blender for 1 minute. Pour mixture into pie shell and bake 30 to 35 minutes at 375 degrees. Center of pie may be liquidy but will set as it cools. Chill and serve with whipped topping.

Washington Pie

Make a pie crust, a double portion, and line a 10x8x2½ -inch pan. Fill with the following:

Soak enough stale white bread to make about 5 cups, pressed out, add:

1½ cups sugar
2 cups applesauce
1 cup seedless raisins
½ cup molasses
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cloves
¼ cup milk

Stir ingredients well and fill lined pan. Add top crust and pinch together. Bake 50 to 60 minutes at 325 degrees. Cool and frost with vanilla icing and cut into 2-inch squares. "Delicious," writes contributor.

ANSWER — Joan St. Germain of Attleboro, Ma. asked if anyone has a recipe for quick breads that can be made in canning jars? Thanks to Cheryl Pinkerton, Leonardtown, Md., and to Anna Cressman, Slatington, for sending recipes for those baked in a coffee tin. These are fine, but do not keep for months like those baked and sealed in canning jars. Thanks to Greta Dise, Glen Rock, who writes that any recipe can be used — just fill the jars half full, bake until done and then seal jars. She has tried many recipes and sent her favorite cranberry nut bread recipe for you to try. Also, thanks to Pat Greene, Biglerville, for sending in the applesauce cake recipe.

Boston Brown Bread

1 cup rye meal
1 cup cornmeal
1 cup graham or wheat flour
¾ tablespoon baking soda
2 teaspoons salt
¾ cup molasses
2 cups buttermilk

Combine dry ingredients, add molasses and buttermilk. Stir until well mixed. Pour two-thirds full into two well-buttered airtight tins. Be sure to butter lids also. Cover lid with foil and tie so that it will be watertight.

Place containers on a rack in large kettle cotaining enough boiling water to cover the tin halfway. Cover kettle tightly and steam for 1½ to 2 hours, adding more boiling water as needed. Remove the bread from the container and dry slightly in 350 degree oven.

Variation: add 1 cup raisins to dough before steaming.

Cranberry Nut Bread

2 cups unsifted flour, stir to aerate before measuring
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
1 cup fresh or frozen cranberries, coarsely chopped
1 cup walnuts or pecans, coarsely chopped
1 egg
¾ cup milk
¼ cup butter, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla

In large mixing bowl, thoroughly stir together the flour, baking powder, and salt; stir in sugar, cranberries and nuts. In a small mixing bowl, beat egg slightly, add milk, butter and vanilla. Beat to combine. Add flour mixture and stir just until dry ingredients are moistened. Grease jars to be used. Fill jars half full and bake at 325 degrees until browned and cake tester comes out free of batter, about 35 to 45 minutes. Remove one jar at a time from oven, clean sealing edge and seal.

Cook's Question

Canned Applesauce Cake

¾ cup shortening
3⅓ cups sugar
4 large eggs
2 cups applesauce
1½ cups raisins, optional
3⅓ cups chopped nuts, optional
3⅓ cups flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
2 teaspoons baking soda
1½ teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves

Cream shortening with sugar. Beat in eggs and applesauce. Sift together flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt and spices. Blend into applesauce mixture. Add and mix chopped nuts and raisins, if desired.

Fill nine, clean, greased wide-mouth jars half full with prepared batter. Bake open jars about 45 minutes in an oven at 325 degrees. When done, quickly remove one hot jar at a time and clean its sealing edge. Immediately apply and firmly tighten a two-piece, wide mouth canning lid. The lid will form a vacuum seal as the jar cools.

Jars of cooled cake may be stored with other canned foods or placed in a freezer. The cake is safe to get as long as jars remain vacuum sealed. These cakes make attractive gifts. The cake is delicious and provides a conversation piece.

Coffee Can Bread

4 cups unsifted flour, divided
1 package dry yeast
½ cup water
½ cup milk
½ cup butter
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup ground almonds
½ cup chopped raisins
2 eggs, slightly beaten
2 1-pound coffee cans

Mix 2 cups flour with yeast. Stir water, milk, butter, sugar, and salt over low heat until butter melts. Mix with flour and yeast. Add remaining flour, nuts, fruit, and eggs. Dough will be stiff. Knead until smooth and elastic and raisins are distributed. Divide and place in greased coffee cans. Let rise until 1-inch from top of can. Bake at 375 degrees for about 35 minutes.

Whole wheat can be used for all or part of the flour. Molasses, brown sugar or honey can be used for granulated sugar. Any dried fruit can be substituted in place or in addition to raisins. If cinnamon bread is desired, roll out dough, brush with butter and sprinkle with cinnamon before rolling up and baking.

ANSWER — Mrs. James Ollinger of Lancaster would like a recipe for "Moravian Buns," sometimes called small cakes. Thanks to Cathy Unger of Nazareth for sending the recipe.

Moravian Love Feast Buns

4½ to 5 cups flour
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 packages dry yeast
½ cup butter
2 eggs
½ cup mashed potatoes
¾ cup water

In a large bowl, combine 1 cup flour, sugar, salt, and yeast. In a saucepan over low heat, heat water and butter until very warm. With mixer at low speed, gradually pour liquid into dry ingredients; beat until just mixed. Increase speed to medium; beat 2 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Beat in eggs, mashed potatoes, and ¾ cup flour to make a soft dough.

Knead dough on floured board until smooth and elastic, about 10 minutes. Shape into ball and place in large greased bowl; turn dough over so top is greased. Cover with towel; let rise in warm place with no draft, about 1 hour.

On floured surface, cut dough into 12 equal pieces. Shape each into a ball, place on greased cookie sheet and flatten slightly. Cover with towel, let rise again until doubled.

With a sharp knife, cut "M" in center of each ball. In small pan, melt 2 tablespoons butter, use to brush top of buns. Bake until lightly browned; remove to wire racks to cool. Bake at 375 degrees for 25 minutes. Makes 12 buns.

Kid's Korner

Rafting down the Mississippi River, Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn nosh on juicy cheeseburgers made with Swiss cheese and fresh-picked tomatoes "borrowed" from Aunt Polly's garden.

A Tall Cheeseburger Tale

Great American heroes are admired far and wide — and by young and old alike. Tales of their accomplishments and life stories are told again and again.

The cheeseburger—called a hero even among heroes — is a tale you might not have heard, and so the mythical story goes. . . .

On the Wild Frontier

Famed for their explorations along the banks and islands of the Mississippi River, Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn were loyal cheeseburger fans. Cheeseburger supplies were never forgotten on their wild rafting expeditions, and typical fixings included Swiss cheese and fresh vegetables like tomatoes and lettuce "borrowed" from Aunt Polly's garden.

In Paul Bunyan's neck of the woods, cheeseburgers were like everything else — BIG. He liked an extra-thick beef patty topped with two slices each of sharp Cheddar and Monterey Jack cheeses. Robust condiments like wild mushrooms, chopped onions and coarse grain mustard were also found on an oversized bun.

In the Midwest, Johnny Appleseed enjoyed an original apple-cheeseburger combination. Slices of fresh-from-the-tree green apples added a pleasing crunch to a burger topped with Colby and Muenster cheeses on a whole wheat bun.

Further west, Billy the Kid was a character not to be messed with — as posters often warned. He cooked burgers over an open fire and topped them with American cheese and lots of raw white onions. For bread, his top choice was a toss-up — either garlic toast or a fresh onion roll.

In the History Books

Well-traveled Amelia Earhart flew across the country looking for the best cheeseburger. Her favorite was cooked medium-rare, served on toasted French bread and topped with Limburger cheese, tomato slices, and sweet pickles.

Basic was better as far as Abraham Lincoln was concerned. Just a plain lean ground beef patty on one of Sarah's homemade rolls with Brick and Cheddar cheeses suited him fine.

On the other hand, patriotic Uncle Sam liked a burger dressed in red, white and blue. Crumbled Blue cheese starred with two slices of ripe red tomato and White Cheddar on a lean U.S.A. ground beef patty for his "cheeseburger of choice."

In the Land of Make-Believe

Barnum Bailey and the Ringling Brothers claimed they had the "Greatest Cheeseburger on Earth," a fun-filled burger featuring American cheese cut-outs shaped like elephants, lions and tigers (made with animal-shaped cookie cutters).

The cheesy circus animals danced amidst catsup, mustard and pickles on a lean beef patty beneath a sesame seed bun.

In "Never Never Land," Peter Pan's cheeseburger was strictly for kids. Yummy peanut butter spread on a basic hamburger bun was a popular addition to a burger topped with melted Cheddar cheese.

Dorothy learned a different trick when she visited the Wizard of Oz. The Emerald City's flavorful beef patty was made with a mixture of lean ground beef, chopped green bell peppers and thinly sliced green onions. Topped with Muenster cheese and served on pumpernickel bread lined with salad greens, it was a favorite in the Land of Oz.

In Yellowstone Park, a cheeseburger cookout was — and still is — a common sight. To this day, Smokey Bear can be seen noshing on a well-done lean beef patty topped with smoked Gouda and smoked Cheddar cheeses, extra-crisp smoked bacon and a spoonful of sweet honey. The bun, of course, is lightly toasted.

Fact or fiction, one thing is certain — the cheeseburger legend lives on.

Cheeseburgers—Cookout Star

Cheeseburgers are one of the preferred main dish choices of the small-fry set. According to a recent Gallup poll sponsored by ConAgra, kids ages 3 to 11 choose cheeseburgers as a favorite food 42 percent of the time. They taste great, are easy to eat and can be topped in all kinds of creative ways. All Mom and Dad need to provide are the all-beef patties, choice of cheese, buns and assorted fixings.

CHEESEBURGER BABIES

Yield: 8 small burgers

1 pound lean ground beef
8 dinner rolls or small hamburger buns (2½ -inch diameter)
Assorted cheese and condiments

Divide ground beef into 8 equal portions; shape into patties 3 inches in diameter.

Place patties on grid over medium coals. Grill 6 to 7 minutes for medium* or to desired doneness, turning once.

*To broil, arrange patties on rack of broiler pan so surface of meat is 3 to 4 inches from heat.

Sail Burger Babies: Arrange lettuce leaf and small tomato slice on roll bottom; top with burger and pickle slice. Cut a 1 ounce slice of American cheese into quarters to form triangles; insert pretzel stick along one side to form sail. Carefully push bottom of pretzel stick through pickle and into burger. Serve roll top alongside.

TAKING TIME

Extension Home Economist

A MOTHER OF THE '90S

"Mother." I wonder if Webster would ever considered defining the term as, "A woman who acts as chauffeur, counselor, teacher, manager, and accountant for her children while filling other roles like co-worker, wife, daughter, friend, and volunteer. A woman who, with limited time, energy, and finances, strives to satisfy an unlimited, unending set of demands."

Mothers. Tomorrow we set aside a day to celebrate your importance. With all the hoopla I can possibly create, I salute you!

Mothers have always faced challenges, but a mother of the '90s is confronted with a new set of issues and questions. Consider these changes affecting mothers:

In the 1960s, 29 percent of married women with children under 18 worked outside the home. In the 1990s, 65 percent of all married women with children under 18 work outside the home.

Twenty-five percent of families are single-parent families.

The population over age 65 in Pennsylvania is rapidly increasing and daughters and daughters-in-law are primary caregivers. Some 1.8 million women now care for parents and children simultaneously. One report estimates that on the average a woman will spend 17 years caring for children and 18 years caring for an aging parent.

Mothers may get overwhelmed.

In support of all those moms who are trying to do their best, I'd like to suggest some ways for the rest of us to encourage them.

For Mother's Day:

• Exercise your creativity and make a card for her to display on the refrigerator, car dash, or bulletin board that says, "If I don't do it, it won't be done exactly the way I want it. And that's okay!" Or "I heard the good news... Superwoman doesn't live here anymore."

Let her know it's okay (in fact, she's setting a realistic example for her children) to not do everything.

• Bring her fresh cut garden or wildflowers and tell her, "My love is always with you. I trust you to ask for my support."

• Give her a much-deserved back rub or foot rub.

• Sit on the chair and rock together while you listen to soothing music.

• Iron a newly, laundered set of sheets and pillow cases and as a team effort with dad or other children, make up and turn down her bed as a special treat.

• Toddlers may invite mom to unwind with them in a hot bubble bath accented by warm candlelight at the end of the day.

• Surprise her with an unexplained break from your presence and the kids. "We're going out . . . enjoy your break!"

• Give her a note that outlines the ways you want to celebrate her efforts and support her in the weeks to come. These may include making dinner one night each week, agreeing to carry the dirty laundry hamper downstairs each time she needs it, promising to bathe the youngsters several evenings each week so she can have some quiet time to herself, regularly clearing off your own dishes after meals, volunteering to pump the gasoline when you're in the car, asking if she needs anything the next time you run an errand in town (and not resenting it when she says, "Yes, would you please . . ."), saying at least once every day, "I love you, and I appreciate what you do."

Most of these "acts of care" take little time. Ironically, most of them would also be a grand morale boost to the overworked mom. It's a matter of taking time.

If you're a mom, don't be embarrassed to drop a few of these suggestions as hints. Take advantage of the opportune moment — Mother's Day.

And remember, do take some time for yourself. You've earned it. Here's to you!

The entertainment was provided by Carol Soller, Camphill, who gave a program on vegetable creations. She designed several centerpieces from carved vegetables.

The winner of the door prize was Joyce Blauch who received a vegetable creation. Refreshments were served followed by a business meeting.

Lancaster Society 20

The April meeting of Farm Women #20 was held at the Memorial United Methodist Church when Societies #23, #15, and the county officers were entertained at a covered dish dinner. Rev. James Price, pastor of the church, asked the blessing.

Devotions were by Vera Herr who read from John 1, followed by a poem "Life's Little Blessings." After praying the Lord's Prayer and Salute to the Flag the meeting was called to order by the president, Vera Herr. In response to the Roll Call each member named their favorite spring flower.

Valeria Ferguson, chairperson of the Ways and Means Committee, said the profit from the food stand at the Andrews Bridge horse races was $566.88. The Sunshine Committee reported gifts given and two cards sent. The state president, Arlene Witman, read a letter written in 1933 by Mrs. William Bucher, a resident of the southern end, regarding farm women's work and activities at that time. Votes were taken on four charities to be supported and "Make-A-Wish" received the most votes.

For the program, Sandy Hoover delightfully entertained the group by singing a number of songs. Her mother, Carol Huber, spoke on "Women of the Bible" and she mentioned there are 300 women mentioned in the Bible and about 150 are named, the first, of course, being Eve.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Birthdays come and birthdays go! In time, they add up to a lot of years. It is almost easier to remember my grandparents' birthdays than all of my grandchildren's.

As our immediate family is scattered, I send quite a few letters and many birthday cards. It is always a problem to know when to mail them so that they will arrive on the right day. Many of them must travel across the country.

My husband just got a card three weeks early. I believe the sender was thinking of his brother's birthday. I like to get my cards on the exact day but I realize that isn't easy to accomplish.

I've kept a birthday book for some 50 years and some months are crowded with weddings and birthdays - even deaths are recorded. It is a wonderful little reference book.

Recently a cousin of mine died, and I was so busy arranging the funeral and service that I completely forgot about sending cards. Usually I send many each month. In addition to dealing with ministers, funeral directors and lawyers, I had to completely empty her house.

This past month is not one that I would want to live through again. There were drawers and closets full of papers and clothes and the decision had to be made as to what to do with everything. Books to a library, frozen food to a Friendship Community and clothes to a ReUse-It shop.

But despite all this, I realize the job was easy compared to what someone would have to do for me if I simply walked out one day and never came back. My house is full to overflowing and I can't even imagine moving to another house.

Milk IT DOES A BODY GOOD.

BEEFestival To Be Held In Carroll County

WESTMINSTER, Md. — The third annual Maryland BEEFestival will be held at the Carroll County Farm Museum on Sunday, June 23 from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

This year marks the first year this BEEFestival will be held at the Farm Museum. The festival is cosponsored by the Maryland Beef Council, the Maryland Cattlemen's Association, and Maryland's organized beef breeds.

The farm museum grounds will abound with the aroma of nutritionally prepared beef-related foods. A variety of beef selections will include pit beef, shish kabob, teriyaki stir fry, beefburgers, beefdogs, ground beef barbecue, rib eye steaks, fajitas, and more.

Attention will be focused on the 1991 Maryland beef cookoff contest. The category for this cookoff is "outdoor barbecue." All amateur chefs are invited to lend their culinary skills for this contest.

Just bring your own utensils and outdoor grill. The first prize winner's recipe will be entered in the mid-Atlantic region beef cookoff contest to compete for an all-expense paid trip to the 1991 National Beef Cookoff in Colorado Springs, Colo., September 22 and 24. For contest rules, contact Anita L. Wehrman, Maryland Beef Council, (301) 592-3940. Deadline for entries is June 1.

And, for professional chefs, the chef's cookoff provides the opportunity to promote your restaurant. All professional chefs are invited to prepare their favorite beef recipe on an outdoor charcoal grill. Winning chef recipes will be judged on taste, originality, and presentation. For more information and entry forms on this particular event, contact Betsy Rippeon, (301) 670-9300.

Admission to the BEEFestival is $3 for adults, $2 for ages 6 to 18 and over 60, and under 6 is free with chaperone. For more information, call the Farm Museum office at (301) 848-7775, (301) 876-2667, or (800) 654-4645. The event will be held rain or shine.

CHILD CARE IN THE '90'S

During the decade of the 1990s, it is projected that three out of four children will be enrolled in some type of child care program. In such programs, children have the chance to meet new friends, discover new worlds of music, art and creativity, explore the ups and downs of jungle gyms and learn to be responsible for themselves and others — at an earlier age than ever before.

Such togethemess creates good, healthy human relationships. But when children are together in group settings, they are also exposed to many new germs for the first time. And because young children's immune systems are not fully developed, the chance of becoming ill is increased.

In addition, children many not always follow food hygiene habits. They often suck their thumbs and put things in their mouths — habits that help spread diseases. Practicing good cleanliness is one step in helping prevent the spread of infectious diseases and keeping children well.

Medical experts agree that handwashing is an important way to reduce the spread of infectious diseases. Why? Because hands are often warm and moist, they are the perfect place for germs to live. Since hands, especially children's hands, are constantly touching things (picking up germs as well as spreading them), at the end of the day children often bring these germs home without even knowing it.

Thus, by practicing good handwashing habits, children (and their families) decrease their chances of becoming ill — helping them stay well from day to day. In this way, children develop good health habits that will stay with them throughout their lives.

Make it a family project to practice the following four simple handwashing steps:

1. Wet hands with warm, running water.
2. Add soap, then rub hands together, making a soapy lather. Do this away from the running water. Wash the fronts and backs of hands, as well as between fingers and under nails.
3. Rinse hands well under warm, running water.
4. Dry hands thoroughly with a clean towel.

Linda Heisey whips up some strawberry topping in her turn-of-the century kitchen. Unlike most women, Linda has two kitchens, a modern one and a reconstructed one from the turn of the century.

Strawberry Lady Caps Season With 400 Pies

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — "There goes the Strawberry Lady," whisper children and adults when Linda Heisey of Mount Joy enters a room."

While Linda wears many "hats," her favorite is the Strawberry Lady.

Dressed with strawberry-shaped earrings and clothed with a strawberry-designed apron, Linda said that she earned her nickname because she is in charge of making strawberry pies for the annual Kraybill Mennonite School Benefit Auction for the past 14 years.

"It's so much fun and so satisfying to see people's faces when they see the volume of strawberry pies displayed," Linda said.

Today is the date for the annual benefit auction where 400 pies will be sold. Throughout the day, customers will buy the pies whole or by the piece. Most prefer the pie topped with whipped cream, but others like it plain.

"I get most of the credit for the pies, but I shouldn't," Linda said. "There are so many people helping, I could never do it alone."

The day before the sale, about 600 quarts of berries are flown in from California because they taste and hold up better than those raised in Florida, according to Linda.

Although the pies need to be made the day of the sale, much of the preparation can be done ahead of time. Linda lines up the help.

"We used to have mothers and grandmothers bake the shells, but the flavor varied so much that we thought it was best to have a more uniform taste," Linda said. Now she orders the pie shells from Minnich's Bakery in Lititz.

The day before the sale, it takes Linda about 10 hours to prepare the whipped topping in her kitchen.

The morning of the sale, the strawberries are washed and stemmed by about 20 people.

Other helpers mix the strawberry glaze. For many years the pies were transported from the kitchen to the food area by a garden tractor. But, the pies look better if they are handled gently so the pie shells are filled and "assembly-lined" to the school lobby where another group of 20 ladies top the pies with whipped topping.

"It takes about 3½ hours to get the pies assembled," Linda said. "In all the years, we only lost one pie that smashed when someone accidently dropped it."

Linda's interest in strawberries are not limited to the school benefit auction. She accessorizes her home and wardrobe with strawberry collectibles.

Unlike most women, Linda has two kitchens, a modern one and a reconstructed one from the turn of the century.

"Family pieces just sort of dribbled in so we fixed up the basement so we could keep the pieces together," Linda said. Now she often cooks on the Elmira wood stove for family gatherings and winter evenings.

A Hoosier cabinet houses a flour bin, spice racks, meat grinder, pull-out shelves, bread drawers, and other specially features. The Hoosier was passed down on Linda's side, but many of the antiques originate from her husband, John's side.

The restored kitchen has an Alaska ice box, an Elmira wood stove, a jelly cupboard, and many antiques such as tin plates and a ceramic water jug from a nearby one-room school house.

Although many of her grandparents' things have been passed down, Linda has discovered baskets and other collectibles discarded in odd corners of the barn.

Twenty-two years ago, the Heiseys built a home on the family farm that is still cash cropped by tenant farmers.

Now you can tie bales at least 70 percent faster and make better looking bales, too, with a New Holland round baler equipped with the Fastnet net wrap system. The black plastic netting extends the entire width of bale, so you rotate a finished bale only twice. Compare this with the 12 to 18 revolutions needed for most twine-tied bales. Enjoy A Stroll Through Herb And Flower Gardens

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HAMBURG (Berks Co.) — Tucked away in the heart of Berks County is the 200-year-old Leatherman farmstead surrounded by picturesque hills and valleys dotted with grazing cattle. The virgin beauty of the landscape is enhanced by the green-thumb expertise of Clarinda Leatherman, former Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess.

Flowers, herbs, and shrubbery line the house and farm buildings. Because friends and relatives often remark about how much they admire the flowers and greenery that grow there, Clarinda is planning a garden party for all who'd like to come.

A bit of an entrepreneur, Clarinda has dabbled in several enterprises since her dairy princess reign in 1987. She's worked for a garden center, held Christmas craft open houses, and become a sales person for Longeberger Baskets. And, during all this time, she hasn't forgotten how much she enjoyed meeting people during dairy promotions.

Now, Clarinda's combined a little bit of all these activities to launch her latest venture — a Basket Garden Party.

It's a day for guests to stroll through the colorful herb and flower gardens that surround the stone farmhouse. It's also a day to ask Clarinda questions you might have about planting perennials and herbs. And, it's a day to purchase plants, baskets, and garden-related crafts.

Known for her creativity and ingenuity of decorating houses inside and out, Clarinda likes to share her expertise with others. She likes to help others organize their gardens.

"It's important to know the growth patterns of the plants when you place them in the garden," she said. "Keep taller plants to the back. Flowering gardens look best if planted in steps of heights. It's good to have different textures such as spikes or rounded plants."

Clarinda said, "A lot of people don't realize that many early-blooming plants will bloom again if the fall if they are cut back early in the season."

Guests may sit at the round tables covered with flowered cloths and enjoy mint tea punch and herb-flavored pretzels while enjoying the landscape.

In addition to the Longeberger baskets, crafts such as garden benches, tea-dyed bunnies, dolls, garden spool babies, potpourri bags, herb sachets, garden hats, herb dryers, Shepherd's crook and herb-painted slates will be sold.

All are invited to the Basket Garden Party on May 17, from 10:00 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. and May 18, from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Directions to the Leatherman farm: Route 61 and 662 at Shoemakersville light go south on Route 662 to first left Drieblebis Mill Road (bear right) and follow signs. For more information, call (215) 562-4161.

More than 140 varieties of perennials surround the Leatherman farm in Hamburg. Notice the cows that graze in the background.

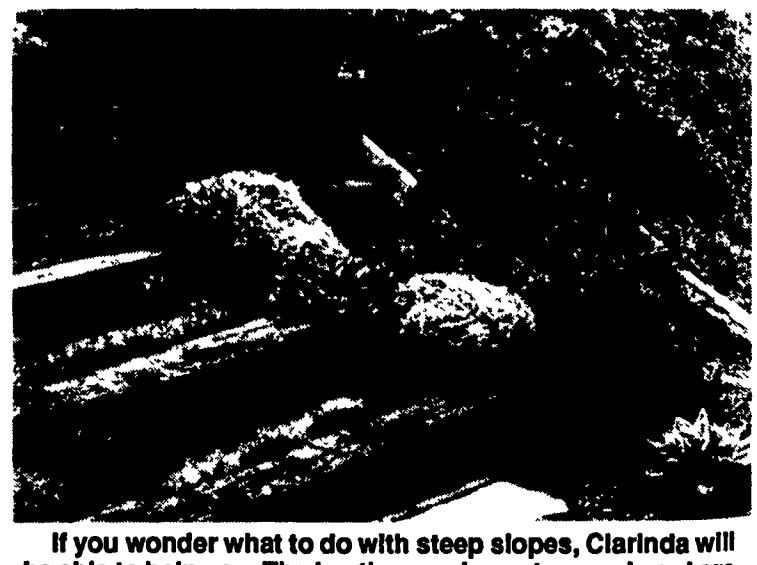
Clarinda offers assistance to those who would like to set up herb and perennial gardens. It's important she said to know the growth patterns of plants so that the garden looks good year-around.



If you wonder what to do with steep slopes, Clarinda will be able to help you. The Leatherman's pasture and yard are separated by a steep incline.

Students Hatch Chicks

Students in eight Lycoming County School classrooms are hatching chicks this year as part of a special project sponsored by the 4-H department of Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Under the supervision of the teachers, students care for chicks in an incubator while they develop. Most eggs are obtained from the poultry science department at the university.

One school is hatching pheasant eggs obtained from the Loyalsock Game Farm and another is working with special "fancy" chicken eggs from Tioga County.

Through the project, the students are able to observe the daily development of the embryo by "candling" it: holding it up to a light to see the embryo. Students learn to keep records as they daily monitor the temperature inside the incubator, the amount of humidity as seen on the hygrometer, and the number of times the eggs are turned daily.

Students are also able to work through a manual and learn the priniciples of reproduction through egg fertilization and cell division. They learn the parts of the egg and understand the incubation process. After the chicks hatch, they learn how to take care of them; how to to water and feed them; and how to keep them clean and warm.

In Pennsylvania, more than 40,000 students take part in the chick embryology project every year.

Local 4-H'ers Participate In Capital Days

4-H'ers Yvonne Guillaume, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorene Guillaume, Trout Run and Joanne Lehman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Lehman, Jersey Shore, participated in the Pennsylvania State Capital Days, an annual citizenship awareness event, held recently in Harrisburg.

They were among 160 students from across the state who participated in the two-day program that shows 4-H'ers how the state government works and helps them understand the responsibilities they have as citizens.

On Monday, April 8, the 4-H'ers visited different state agencies, including the departments of agriculture, transportation, education, and commerce. Following their visits, the 4-H'ers developed a program that included a funding proposal and budget related to one of the agencies. The students then proposed the program to a panel composed of extension agents.

On Monday evening, Friends of 4-H donors were recognized with a banquet. The donors were seated with the 4-H'ers so they could learn about different 4-H programs.

On Tuesday morning, 4-H'ers joined Sen. Roger Madigan at a legislative banquet. The day ended with a tour of the capitol and visits to legislator's offices.

Lancaster County 4-H Woolies Club

The Lancaster County 4-H Woolies Club met on Monday, April 15, at 7 p.m.

The meeting was held at the East Donegal Township Building, Maytown, and was called to order by president Mark Tracy.

It was announced that there will be a carcass lamb show along with a roundup, August 8, at the Solanco Fairgrounds. All members interested were asked to sign up for this show. The group was also informed about some upcoming sales to buy project lambs.

The program for the evening was "Project Lamb Selection." Gerald Tracy, leader, gave a demonstration with live lambs on what to look for when choosing project lambs, both market and breeding. Lambs represented the Dorset, Suffolk, Hampshire, and Polypay breeds. Members were given hands-on experience in comparing the qualities and differences of the lambs.

The next Woolies Club meeting will be Monday, May 20, at 7 p.m. at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center. The group will be discussing feeding and project books.

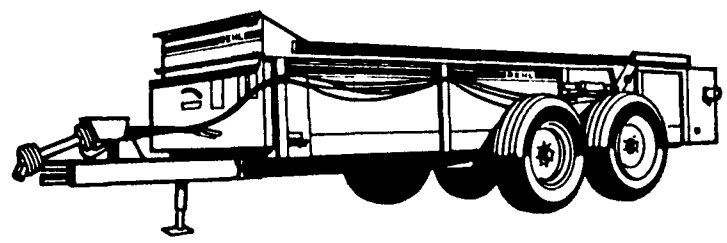
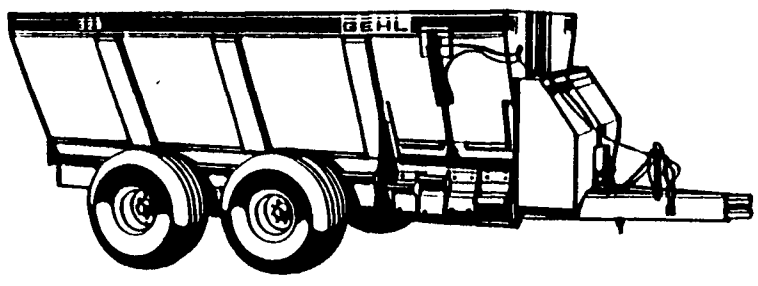
See your Gehl Dealer today on how the 4510/4610 Skid Loaders can get the job done for you.

Unbeatable...

Priced right

If you handle mostly solid manure, a Gehl box spreader has the performance features you want at a price you'll appreciate Features include special Gehl-Tuff flooring that prevents the apron from freezing to the floor and lets manure slide out with little resistance, 12-gauge, corrosion-resistant GEHL STEEL sides for strength and endurance, wide-spread beater paddles for wide, even spreads, constant velocity pto, and a standard two-speed worm drive transmission Add a 10-year warranty on the floor and sides and you have an unbeatable package available only from your Gehl dealer





The one spreader for the two spreader farm

Spead liquids, semi-solids, solids, pen-packed, even frozen manure. A Gehl Scavenger® II manure spreader does the work of two spreaders for the price of one. It's built for efficiency, with a heavy-duty square-tube auger that works harder than conventional round augers. The auger powers up and down hydraulically to prevent bridging and cut through winter-freeze-ups. Variflo front, right-hand discharge gives you complete application control.

Bedford County Couple Chal

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

EVERETT (Bedford Co.) — Kate Puritt wasn't looking for a farm. When her sister in real estate called to tell her of the picturesque old farm she had discovered in Bedford County, it perked her interest. The price was right.

Kate was about to marry Dale Thompson and the more the two of them talked it over, the more it sounded like a good idea.

Forming a partnership with Kate's mother and several other relatives, the couple purchased the 83 acres and set about earning a living raising sheep, chickens, hogs, rabbits and organic vegetables.

"Our first step was to make ourselves self-sufficient," explains Kate. "This will be our fourth summer. The first three years threw every variety of weather possible at us. The first year we had a drought; the second, it rained all the time. Then, last year, it was so cold that nothing grew at a normal pace."

Despite it all, Dale and Kate have been making it. "But we are still waiting for Kate to win the lottery to finish remodeling the house," Dale laughs.

The couple spends all of their spare time (which is limited) on the house and now have several of the downstairs rooms finished.

Kate and Dale both have backgrounds in farming. Prior to moving to Bedford County, Dale was working for the Volunteer Heifer Project International which is a self-help hunger organization.

Kate was working for the Kerr Center for Sustainable Agriculture.

"But organic farming is much different," Kate explains. "We use no synthetic chemicals or fertilizer on our vegetables. And, we use no steroids or other methods of treatment on our animals unless they get sick."

"I was used to mixing antibiotics in the hog feed on a regular basis," says Dale. "And, the hogs still got sick."

"But, organic farming is a constant challenge," the couple agrees. "Every year is something different."

Last year, the cucumber bugs were destroying the vegetables and, just as Kate was about to resort to a method which would have killed good bugs along with the bad, nature took over. "The Pennsylvania Leatherbugs arrived and ate the cucumber bugs," Kate laughs.

The farm couple has also discovered that potato bugs will die from eating oat bran. "The bran swells and causes them to die," Dale explains. He jokingly adds that perhaps oat bran should carry a label indicating that, "Oat bran could be hazardous to your health if you are a potato bug."

"This year we are already having a problem with Japanese beetles," Kate says. She is presently putting beneficial nematodes in the ground to help solve this problem. "Nematodes," she explains, "can be good or bad. Something like good and bad cholesterol. Beneficial nematodes will kill only the beetles and not destroy the good insects."

Kate raises all of her own vegetable bedding plants. Beginning in early March she plants the seeds in containers on the glass-enclosed porch of the farmhouse. "They tell us to expect about 50 percent of the seeds to germinate," she says. "This year, I'm sure I had 90 percent."

Plants include all types of vegetables, herbs, and flowers. "I like flowers because I like color," Kate says. She does a lot of companion planting with her herbs.

The Thompson farm includes 71 sheep (41 new lambs this spring), 10 to 20 hogs, and a flock of chickens. The rabbits are their latest venture and are raised in air-conditioned comfort according to the guidelines of that industry.

Sheep are raised with intensive rotational grazing. Dale and Kate plan to try the same thing with their chickens by putting them in movable crates.

Dale has concerns about the over-population of deer in Bedford County. "Nature usually does a good job of thinning down over-population of any species," he says. "When over-population occurs, disease usually strikes."

His big concern with this is that the deer disease is usually "blue tongue," which will also kill sheep. The disease is spread through saliva.

Marketing remains the number one problem with Dale and Kate. "Farmers are terrible marketers," Kate says. "But, we are so busy combating the other problems, we don't have a lot of time for it."

They have a good clientele for both their meat and vegetables from Evansburg to Washington D.C. and the word has been spread primarily by word of mouth. "We tried an ad in a nearby paper and got one call," Kate says. "The word of mouth worked much better."

Last summer the couple worked with local county agent Dick Dale to start a farmer's market in Everett. This year they plan to expand the market to Bedford.

"We would also like to start a marketing co-op to sell our meat and vegetables to restaurants in the Washington D.C. area," Kate says. "There are a lot of small sheep and hog farmers in the area who should be interested."

Eventually they hope to raise enough crops to feed their own animals. "For now, it's tough," Dale says. "The ground on this old farm has been corned to death and we have to start over with crop rotation."

Kate and Dale have recently planted raspberry bushes and they constantly look for other crops which would be of interest. "For instance," Kate says, "Bittersweet brings a good price at craft stands."

Leisure time is something that Dale and Kate find to be almost nonexistent. In addition to all the planting and feeding, Kate

Kate and Dale are already setting out plants for this summer's vegetable crop.

LEADERSHIP AT WORK®

Challenged By Organic Farming

works as a pharmacist's assistant at a Bedfrod pharmacy.

When they do have a few minutes, they can take time to enjoy life from the deck on the back of the house which overlooks a picturesque pond. A pair of Canadian geese have chosen this peaceful spot for a residence.

Butch, the resident Border collie, is an all purpose pet who will round up the sheep at a moment's notice or swim after the quacking ducks if he is asked to do so.

At the slightest invitation to "go for a swim," he will run pell-mell toward the pond, ears flat back, tail straight out, as if his very life depended on setting a new record. A quick swim around the pond and he is ready for praise.

"Life is never boring here," Kate laughs.

So far, the couple is not sorry they undertook a venture many might have found to be impossible.

Heisey's Farm Service, which custom applies anhydrous ammonia nitrogen, is owned and operated by Linda and John. Linda helps her husband dispatch the drivers and does the bookkeeping.

"I'm fortunate to be a "stay at home mom and have a career at the same time," Linda said.

The Heisey family lays claim to fame by having been featured on the CNN (Cable Network News) channel. Linda had taken a nutrition class sponsored by St. Joseph's Hospital. She lost 30 pounds without dieting but by modifying her cooking habits. The class taught her how to cut fat out of her diet without drastic lifestyle changes. CNN showed Linda making pot pie, cabbage slaw, and apple crisp by using the nutritional input she received from the hospital.

"After that every newspaper in the area called up for a newspaper interview," Linda said.

If you don't get to the Kraybill Mennonite School Sale, try this recipe that Linda uses to make the 400 pies.

STRAWBERRY PIE

3 tablespoons instant clear-jell mixed with

Add:

1 cup cold water or fruit juice
1½ quarts of strawberries
Red food coloring, if desired

REAL ESTATE

401+ Acres of very desirable land in one tremendous tract. Consists of approx. 250 acres m/l of tillable farmland, the balance consists of some woodland and the rest of bottomland pasture with running stream of water. Both farmland and pasture have been lying fallow for several years. The large dwelling, bank barn and outbuildings are now in a state of disrepair. But this is a great parcel of land which, when you see it, will speak for itself. The new owners can redo the improvements to their own liking. The land is the main consideration with 401+ acres in one package.

The unique topography of this southern York County land gives beautiful vistas in several directions, one of which overlooks the Susquehanna River, which forms the eastern boundary of the farm. The Mason-Dixon Line forms the southern boundary, and Cooper Road forms approx. ¾ mi. of the western boundary. If you are in the market for a crop or cattle farm, wish to create a showplace, or desire a rural refuge surrounded by the white tail deer which abound, attend Open House and consider this farm.

A down-payment of 10% of the gavel price is required on the day of auction. Balance due in-full on or before July 18, 1991 at settlement. Additional terms pertaining to Orphan's Court approval of price, etc. available at Open House.

TURKEY PRODUCTS ARE CHANGING

Milton Madison
Assistant Professor
Agricultural Economics

There have been great changes in the turkey growing, processing, and marketing industries during the last 30 years.

Turkey production has increased to six times what it was in 1960. Increases for some parts of the year are even more impressive. In 1960, turkey was a seasonal food reserved for fall holidays. More than 90 percent of the turkeys were produced and marketed during the last half of the year.

By 1970, the portion of production in the fourth quarter had fallen below half, but 85 percent of the turkeys were still produced in the last half of the year. In 1980, third and fourth quarter production were nearly equal and 60 percent of the production came in the last half of the year. By 1990, the quarterly production levels were nearly even with 22, 24, 27, and 27 percent produced in the first, second, third, and fourth quarters, respectively.

Spreading production over the entire year has allowed the turkey industry to increase production much more rapidly than it has had to expand farm and slaughter capacity. When production took place primarily in the last half of the year, most turkey equipment was not used the other half of the year. With more equal production patterns, six times as much turkey meat is produced annually but only three times as much equipment is required.

The benefits of using the equipment over a longer period of time each year makes up the difference. Fourth quarter production was only three times as large in 1990 as in 1960, while first quarter production was 35 times as large.

Changes in turkey marketing were necessary in order to utilize year-round production. In 1960, nine out of every 10 turkeys were marketed as whole birds.

The pounds of turkey sold as whole birds has been relatively constant over the years. Whole body birds weighing 735 million pounds were sold in 1960. Sales peaked at 799 million pounds in 1970, and have fallen to an estimated 671 million pounds (15 percent of turkey production) in 1990. Smaller family sizes and wider spread families result in smaller holiday gatherings and are probably limiting whole bird sales.

How have the vast increases in turkey production been marketed? The two major categories with sales increases have been cut-up and further processed. Availability of drum sticks, thighs, wings, and breasts in consumer packs in the meat case have shown the development of the cut-up market. Dark meat portions are lower priced and it usually is difficult for companies to sell enough dark meat to get the amount of white meat they need.

It appears that recently the further processed dark meat products have become successful enough that the balance of product needs is changing. Reports of dark meat shortages have been heard recently and price relationships for turkey parts appear to be changing.

February turkey parts prices showed drumsticks and boneless thigh meat higher in price than for both previous Februarys, while breast portions were lower priced than the previous two years. It appears that the value of dark meat has increased and breast meat decreased, at least temporarily. Future price reports will confirm whether or not this is a shift in turkey demand or just a temporary shortage of dark meat.

Profitability Traits in Feedlot Steers

A recent report from the University of Missouri identifies several animal and economic variables that influence profitability for feedlot steers. The trial used data accumulated during five years in a feedlot program.

Animal data included average daily gain, starting weight, frame size, final weight, feed conversion, quality grade, internal carcass fat, dressing percentage, and total feed intake. Economic data included initial steer value, feed cost per head, and lot cost per head. Veterinary, marketing, and fixed costs were assumed to be the same for all the animals.

Variables that correlated well with profit (total carcass value minus all costs) were not usually associated with the animal. The highest correlations with profit were initial value (.47) and quality grade (.40). Those with lower relationships were feed conversion (-.25) and starting weight (-.23). It is also important to note that frame size was negatively associated with profitability; that is, as frame size increased, profits went down. In fact, this relationship was almost the same as that between average daily gain and profit.

Feedlot operators will often tell you the key to success in feeding cattle is to buy them as cheaply as you can and feed them until they grade Choice. This study certainly confirms that statement.

Implant Comparisons

A recent Iowa State University project investigated the effects of implanting feedlot steers with three types of implants. The treatments included no implants, Revelor implants (a combination of trenbolone acetate and estradiol) at day 0 or day 0 and 80, Synovex at day 0 and/or day 0 and 80, and Synovex at day 0 and Synovex plus Finaplix (trenbolone acetate) at day 80. The objectives were to measure feedlot performance and carcass traits in the steers.

Results showed that all implant strategies improved feedlot performance compared to controls. Revelor implants at day 0 and 80 and Synovex at day 0 and 80 had similar response in carcass quality with significantly fewer steers grading Choice, but those with the double Revelor implants had faster daily gains and larger ribeye size. A single initial or terminal implant (Revelor at day 0 only or Synovex plus Finaplix at day 80) tended to increase feedlot performance without sacrificing carcass grade.

Implanting steers with trenbolone acetate is currently being heavily researched. Many of the earlier studies have shown that implanting tends to reduce carcass quality while providing greater performance. From this study, it appears that a terminal implant or an initial implant only will give a desirable response. Finaplix and Synovex are available now, but Revelor is not currently available.

Use of growth-promoting implants will consistently be a profitable tool. However, new types of implants should be selected and used to their best advantage for the market that is served.

Salt Content of Rations to Control Intake

Cattle wt. (lb)	Salt intake (%)	(daily feed intake, lb) 1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
400	0.4	29	17	12	9	7	6	5	---
500	0.5	33	20	14	11	9	8	7	6
700	0.7	41	26	19	15	12	10	9	8
1100	1.0	52	35	27	22	18	16	14	13
1400	1.4	58	41	32	26	22	19	17	15

Other management factors when using high-salt rations:
- Have plenty of water continuously available.
- Use plain white salt in grain mixes.
- Use wooden feeders when available.
- Mix small batches of grain-salt mixes at first since cattle will tend to adjust to the salt over a 3-4 week period.
- A rule of thumb is to start at 10 percent salt and adjust it to meet intake needs.

Using Salt to Limit Intake of Self-Fed Grain & Supplements

The addition of salt to supplemental grains or protein supplements is an effective way to limit intake to a desired level.

For example, beef animals will eat about one tenth of a percent of their body weight daily as salt, so supplements may be mixed with the appropriate amount of salt to reach a desired intake. The following table describes how these mixes may be formulated:

KEYS TO MAKING AND FEEDING QUALITY HAY FOR BEEF COWS

For most of the productive year, an average-sized beef cow can meet most of her nutritional needs with some good quality hay. This is particularly true if there is a small percentage of legume mixed with grass in the hay.

Most producers are aware of the proper stage of these grasses and legumes for harvesting. The key component is that, if the plant is mature, there is a reduction in feed value.

We often hear about tons of hay produced per acre. If we are selling the hay by the ton, this would be appropriate. If we are feeding beef cows, we should be more concerned about the TDN and protein production per acre, and these factors can be improved by proper harvest.

Mother Nature will often dictate when we will harvest hay in Pennsylvania, but give some thought to harvesting a little early this year to capture more feed value instead of waiting for tonnage.

For example, the energy value of alfalfa hay will be reduced by almost 20 percent when cutting at full bloom instead of at early bloom. Similar differences in energy value also exist for grass hays cut at a later maturity.

Many of the hay-treatment products are effective. Propionic acid treatment of hay at moisture levels of 20-30 percent will effectively eliminate molds and reduce dry matter losses by a half.

Bale wrapping is another alternative for some producers. A farmer recently told me it costs him about $3.50 per bale to wrap them, but he was able to get a cutting in late October that would not have been possible from a conventional harvest since he was able to bale within hours after cutting. In addition to reducing harvesting losses, the bale wrap also provides a storage advantage to maintain the hay quality.

We can make some of the highest-quality hay possible, but in conventional big bales stored outside, we can expect to throw away one of every three of the bales from storage losses. A recent summary of several hay storage trials indicated there will be a 29 percent greater feed value in bales stored inside than those stored outside with no cover, and there will be 27 percent more hay in those stored outside with a plastic cover and elevated off the ground.

It does not take much of an economist to determine some kind of cover will be cost-effective for big bales of hay. A big bale of hay is in the form of a cylinder, and, for a bale with a 3-foot diameter, the outside 6 inches of the bale represents about 30 percent of the volume of the bale.

The damage from weather does not have to penetrate very far into the bale to represent a large loss in hay. Elevation off the ground will generally reduce storage losses by about 10 percent. Most water damage to big bales stored outside on the ground is on the underside of the bale, not on the top. Rock, wooden pallets, and small trees can all be used to elevate the bales. Store the bales at the top of the hill on a well drained soil.

Feeding losses with hay can be considerable. For example, it has been determined that unrolling big bales in the pasture with no feeder will result in a loss of 50 percent of the bale. While this practice is often used for soil conservation, it is a very wasteful way to feed hay.

A small ring-type feeder is a wise investment for feeding hay. Losses will be about 30 percent greater in feeding big bales without using some type of feeder. In years of short hay supply, this becomes an essential practice.

The beef producer can effectively eliminate supplemental feeding of beef cows if there is high-quality hay available. Proper harvest timing, some unconventional harvesting methods, proper storage, and proper feeding of the hay can help increase quality and reduce losses.

Fly Control

I have encountered numerous questions recently about fly control in beef cows.

To summarize, the most effective control may still be the insecticide-impregnated ear tags. There is some indication horn flies have built up some resistance to the pyrethrin class of chemicals, so you may wish to change to another chemical class such as diazinon or primiphos-methyl tags.

If you have not used tags or a pyrethrin spray on your farm, there is a good chance you can still do a good job with this product. To determine which class of chemical is in any given tag, simply look at the label on the box. Follow the instructions for their use very closely.

I was in Missouri some years ago when the tags were first being tested, and the original studies showed there was no real advantage to tagging the calf as long as the cows were correctly tagged. But you should use your own judgement based on conditions at your farm on how many tags to use in each cow and whether to put tags in the calves. Some of the tags can last up to five months, so you can determine the economics for yourself of spraying cows weekly or tagging them.

Oral larvicides can be used for fly control. By this method, the insecticide is added to the mineral or protein available to the cows. The compound is such that it is not digested by the cow, but remains in the manure and kills the fly larvae when the eggs are deposited in it. It is only effective against the larvae, so if there is another source of flies, such as other cows across the fence from yours, the flies will not be controlled.

BARN PAINTING
Aim For The Best -
In Coating Film Thickness

To do it right use the finest kind of bristle brush evening out the coating into a film thickness that does not peel in normal moisture stress (found on most barn siding from outside and inside by livestock or stored animal feed)

1. PREPARATION. Peeling old coatings (improperly brushed) needs to be removed The best method is simply water blasting or power washing! High volume of water - medium pressure is best! Done professionally or do it yourself, especially on the easy to reach areas This is resurfacing!!!
2. BEST NEW START ON RESURFACED WOOD SIDING After spraying on this kind of barn paint or stain, take time to pay attention to brush out in all directions to create a film thickness that will prevent future peeling & resurfacing costs & effort This film will let excess moisture breathe through it Depending on the amount of weather wear it can be recoated lightly in 10-15 years Southern exposures usually wear faster

Rotary Recognizes Dairy For Conservation

Hurst uses the manure from his 300-head cow dairy operation, converts it to methane gas, and burns the gas to provide the heat to generate up to 60,000 watts of electricity. The energy is used to supplement the electrical energy usage of the Oregon Dairy Farm Store.

Northeast Rotary recognizes individuals who complete activities to preserve the environment under their Preserve Planet Earth Program. The program purpose is to underscore the need for citizens to take an active role in the preservation of our environment. Larry Gagnon, Rotary Club president, encourages individuals aware of citizens making such contribution to notify his club, located at the Olde Hickory Inn.

Horse Farms Open Doors To Public

TRENTON, N.J. — Horse farms throughout the Garden State have invited the general public to open houses during June, the Month of the Horse, to highlight the state's animal.

To celebrate the Month of the Horse, special events are planned throughout the state. The public is invited to see some of the beautiful farms and animals that are contributing to this significant industry.

According to Agriculture Secretary Art Brown, the horse industry is a significant branch of agriculture. Its contribution to the labor market, recreation, and allied services makes it a billion dollar industry.

MIST SPRAYER ADVANTAGES

1. ROTARTY ATOMIZATION distributes an even size droplet spectrum that greatly improves penetration and coverage.
2. LOW FIRST COST compared with conventional sprayers with the same acreage capabilities.
3. COST LESS TO OPERATE. 50-90% savings on diluent (water or oil). Water swaths at higher speeds with less tank fillings. Save a bundle on fuel.
4. SAVE ON COSTLY CHEMICAL. More complete coverage with 25-50% less chemical compared with conventional dilute solution sprayers.
5. LOW MAINTENANCE. Simple design with few moving parts means little upkeep. No down time due to repairs or plugged nozzles.
6. MORE EFFECTIVE CONTROL as a result of fine particle efficiency through distribution of chemical.
7. COMPACT UNIT — use of smaller tractors and no booms to contend with.

YOUR PRESENCE AT FARROWING CRITICAL

Dr. Richard Barczewski
Extension Agent
U. Of Del.

The decision to engage in a farrowing operation requires a commitment to do the most comprehensive job possible in rearing pigs. While it may be easy to breed and farrow sows, special consideration must be given to the farrowing process itself.

Anyone in the hog industry knows the importance of proper care and management for piglet survival and performance. The most critical time in a piglet's life is birth and the three or four days following. Research summaries indicate that 65 percent of all post-farrowing deaths occur before the litter is 4 days old. Spending a little extra time in the farrowing house during this period can pay dividends in overall profitability.

One way to save more pigs is to be present at farrowing. This may not be practical for all operations, but spending time behind the sow can mean increased numbers of live piglets. You can assist at-risk piglets like those born in the birth sack, weak pigs, or chilled pigs. It's these slightly abnormal or weaker piglets that without your help often die shortly after birth.

I've seen piglets which I knew to be on the verge of death be brought around by suspending them in a bucket of warm water. The warm water helps them maintain vital body temperature and they began to look better within a few minutes. They can then be place at the udder of the sow and encouraged to nurse.

If you are present at farrowing, you may want to trim the umbilical cord if it is very long, and tie or clamp it off before dipping it in a tamed iodine solution. The umbilical cord prior to drying off is an ideal route for bacteria to enter the body. Dipping the cord in iodine usually eliminates potential problems such as navel ill.

If you assist at farrowing, you can help weak piglets to nurse and get colostrum. Colostrum is the antibody-rich first milk of the sow which provides some temporary immunity to the piglets prior to the development of their own immune systems. Making sure piglets get some of this "first milk" can help them fight off early diseases.

After the litter has been born and is nursing well, there is little you have to do for the next 24 hours or so. Sometime during day 1, administer iron shots to prevent anemia, clip needle teeth, and ear-notch the litter. For your records, consider weighing each litter as soon as possible after the pigs are born for a baseline comparison to 21-day litter weights. This serves as an indicator of sow milking ability and helps you in making sow-culling decisions.

Castrate the pigs between days 3 and 14. While this may not always be possible with pasture-farrowed piglets, early castration is usually accomplished with minimal stress.

Finally, get on a good vaccination program as recommended by your veterinarian. Vaccines offer additional protection against specific disease-causing organisms. If you are having problems with certain diseases, you may have to vaccinate the piglets twice.

Regardless of your herd vaccination program, always read and follow the label on medicines you administer to your piglets. Intramuscular, subcutaneous, and intradermal injection are three ways vaccines are given. Never assume that because you administered one vaccine one way that all are administered the same way. Read the label first and follow label instructions.

Swarming Season Is Here Again

Robert E. Leiby
David L. Dunbar
Extension Agents

Swarming season is here again. The Lehigh Valley Beekeepers Association offers the following information about honey bee swarms and how to deal with one if it lands in your lawn or garden.

Remember that swarming is a natural event in the life of a honey bee colony. Swarming occurs most frequently in spring, but it may happen any time between spring and fall frosts. A swarm is simply a group of bees moving from an old home to a new one. Often a swarm will stop to rest and move on the next day.

Usually swarming bees are gentle and not aggressive. There are exceptions, however, so be cautious. The best policy is to leave them undisturbed. Do not spray them with an insecticide or a stream of water from your garden hose. Any such disturbance will kill some of these beneficial insects and will make the rest angry and aggressive. It seldom makes a swarm leave its resting place.

If the swarm does not leave in a day or two, or if there is an urgent reason to remove it, contact a beekeeper. Each year the Lehigh Valley Beekeepers Association publishes a list of members who are willing and able to gather swarms. We have this list at the Lehigh County Extension Office (215) 391-9840. Many police departments also have the list. Another swarm gatherer contact is Lee Schleicher, association vice president, at (215) 266-1772.

1991 Corn Club

The Pennsylvania Five Acre Corn Club is looking for entrants in Lehigh County.

The Corn Club is sponsored by The Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association and Penn State Cooperative Extension. The Corn Club gives Pennsylvania corn producers an opportunity to compare production practices and yields with other corn growers. It also gives them an opportunity to evaluate their cost of producing corn. This information can then be used to fine-tune their corn production system.

If you grow corn and are interested in improving your income, enroll in the Corn Club by contacting your County Extension Office by July 1.

Participants must be at least 18 years old and have a production field that is five acres or larger that has had a Penn State soil test within the past two years. If the area is contoured, two or more strips planted to the same hybrid may be entered to obtain the minimum acreage. Participants may enroll in only one of five harvest categories: two for shelled corn, two for ear corn, and one for silage.

Following the harvest season, club members will receive complete reports of yields and production practices for all members enrolled statewide plus, if they request it, a detailed report of their own costs of production. Last year, 214 corn growers took advantage of this program statewide, and the top yields were more than 200 bushels per acre.

Start Dairy Cattle Grazing Early Enough

Richard Adams, Penn State dairy cattle nutritionist, said feed costs can be reduced and production sometimes improved by an earlier start for pasturing dairy cattle.

Grazing animals when grasses are only four to five inches high will help limit pasture intake for a more gradual conversion to this forage, which will contain higher amounts of protein and, most important, energy.

Forage generally gets ahead of the animals in the spring. Thus is becomes too mature. In addition, much of it will be wasted by tramping and refusal to eat the older material

Limit cows to only a couple of hours of grazing the first few days, and gradually increase grazing time as weather and animal performance warrant. Cows may be kept inside when temperatures are expected to fall appreciably under 40 degrees. An early start also helps to extend the pasture season, reduces reliance on stored forage. and decreases chore time.

Provide some stored forage before turning cows out until they are conditioned to full pasture feeding. Protein levels in the grain mixture often do not need to exceed 16-18 percent when cows are consuming mainly young, actively growing forage.

While income over feed costs may be maximized when feeding concentrates at about a 1:3 or 1:4 grain to milk ratio, cows on full pasture often will not consume this much early in the season. Limit grain feeding to a 5 percent refusal rate. They will consume more later when forage dry matter and energy intakes fall.

The Air You Breathe

Some of this contaminated air contains microscopic mold spores, which may be harmful to any farmer who works with stored grain, baled hay, and high moisture silage. Early spring is a prime time for farm workers to be exposed when literally billions of these mold spores can exist in a close or confined farm building or facility.

Protection is available in the form of respiratory equipment such as toxic dust masks, cartridge respirators, and powered air helmets. It is important, however, that these devices be used on a full-time basis and be kept clean and well maintained.

Allis Gleaner Purchases Hesston

NORCROSS, Ga — Allis Gleaner Company, the holder of Deutz-Allis Corporation, a U.S. farm equipment manufacturer and marketer, and Fiat Geotech S.p.A., a manufacturer and distributor fo farm equipment worldwide, recently announced that they have entered into a memorandum of understanding calling for Deutz-Allis to purchase all of the shares of Hesston Corporation, a major manufacturer and distributor of hay and forage equipment in the North American market.

The proposed acquisition does not include the Woods Division and the distribution of Fiat tractors, and has been prompted by a requirement of the United States Department of Justice that Fiat Geotech divest its existing U.S. based hay and forage machinery business before completing its acquisition of Ford New Holland.

Deutz-Allis Corporation was purchased from Klockner-Humboldt-Deutz (KHD) of West Germany in June 1990 by a management led buy-out which formed the new holding entity known as Allis Gleaner Company. The company currently distributes a line of tractors featuring Deutz air-cooled engines in a range of 50-130 horsepower and a line of self-propelled rotary combines.

Robert J. Ratliff, president and chief executive officer of Deutz-Allis, stated that the purchase was for cash; however, he did not disclose the amount of the transaction. In 1990, Hesston Corporation, excluding the Woods and Fiat products, reported annual sales in excess of $100 million on its major farm products, including round balers, mower conditioners, self-propelled windrowers, square balers, forage harvesters and other related equipment. The company is an equal partner with J.I. case in the Hay and Forage Industries manufacturing business, and no change is anticipated in this arrangement.

Deutz-Allis currently distributes its tractors and combines through a network of approximately 700 dealers throughout North America. According to Ratliff, the Hesston business and dealer contractors will be administered separately and the Hesston identity will be maintained. "The Hesston name is highly respected in the agricultural equipment industry," said Ratliff. "We are extremely pleased to add this quality line of hay and forage equipment to the holdings of the Allis Gleaner Company."

Hesston was founded in 1949 in Hesston, Kansas. The company saw dramatic growth with the introduction of many innovative products for the handling of hay and forage crops. Over the years, the company has captured a significant market share for its products through its network of approximately 650 dealers.

In 1977, Hesston was sold to Fiat Geotech S.p.A. Fiat entered into a manufacturing partnership with J.I. Case in 1987 and continued broad distribution of the Hesston product line. In 1990, Fiat announced that it had negotiated the purchase of Ford New Holland to further expand the company's presence in global agricultural equipment markets. This purchase will be closed soon after the acquisition of Hesston by Deutz-Allis has been closed.

The acquisition provides Allis Gleaner with the opportunity to add a major product line to its company, further strengthen its distribution network, and continue to position the company for future growth opportunities in North America, according to the company.

Report Raises Questions About Conservation Progress

ANKENY, Iowa — While many farmers appear to be implementing their federal soil conservation compliance plans on schedule, many others apparently are making little or no attempt to do so, a national study by a nonprofit organization of conservation professionals shows.

The study also points up significant problems with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's implementation of the sodbuster and swampbuster provisions, which were among the four major programs contained in the Conservation Title of the 1985 farm bill and later extended in the 1990 farm bill.

The three so-called compliance provisions of the 1985 Food Security Act make receipt of federal farm program benefits, including commodity price supports, agricultural credit, and crop insurance contingent on the application of soil erosion control measures and wetlands protection. The conservation compliance policy specifically required all farmers with highly erodible cropland to obtain conservation plans for that land from their local Soil Conservation Service (SCS) office by December 31, 1989 and have those plans fully implemented by January 1, 1995.

In a report based on seven site visits in the Corn Belt, Great Plains, and Pacific Northwest, officials of the Soil and Water Conservation Society (SWCS) say that a quarter of all the conservation practices scheduled to be applied by farmers in 1990 or prior years under the conservation compliance policy either were not in place on the farms observed or did not meet plan requirements. As a result, only 41 percent of the farms checked at the seven sites were in compliance with their plans.

Allowing for some flexibility in determining compliance, SWCS officials said, raised to 54 percent the number of farms at the seven sites judged to be in compliance.

In many instances, crop residue management practices, such as conservation tillage, did not provide the planned level of protective soil cover, SWCS officials report.

"This wasn't unexpected," said Max Schnepf, who directs the study for SWCS. "Our fieldwork in 1989 showed that many plans called for crop residue levels that would be difficult to achieve by farmers who lack experience with conservation tillage methods," he said.

"Moreover," he said, "some plans call for residue levels that probably can't be achieved with current machinery and cropping practices."

"It's important that farmers not put off implementing their compliance plans," said Tony Vrana, SWCS executive vice president, "particularly if they must significantly increase the crop residue levels on their fields. Experimenting with different forms of tillage prior to the plan implementation deadline could be important in achieving the required residue levels and remaining in compliance.

"If farmers feel they can't successfully implement their current compliance plans," Vrana said, "they should visit with their local SCS officials about revising those plans."

While sodbusting appears limited, according to the SWCS report, some land in native grass or trees is being converted to crop production, especially in the Great Plains.

"The main problem with USDA's implementation of sodbuster," Schnepf said, "is that little or no attention is being given to enforcement of the policy at some locations. Members of our evaluation team witnessed a number of apparent sodbuster violations, but no farmers had been held accountable for the violations."

Schnepf said that recordkeeping of sodbusting is poor in some local USDA offices and that nearly half the sodbusting plans checked at the seven study locations do not reduce soil erosion on the sodbusted acres to a tolerable soil loss or "T" level as the law requires. In addition, he said, USDA is not requiring its local officials to certify the application of conservation measures on a sodbusted field or to check periodically to see if a farmer is following his or her conservation plan.

On the basis of interviews with local USDA program managers, producer-committee members, agribusiness representatives, and farmers, Schnepf said that support remains high throughout the agricultural community for both the sodbuster and conservation compliance policies.

Problems cited with implementation of the swampbuster policy also had to do with USDA's enforcement of the policy and with differences of opinion between farmers and government officials ov[illegible]he definition of a wetland an[illegible]he policy's intent.

While some farmers have lost substantial benefits for violating the policy, Schnepf said that SWCS evaluation team members had witnessed apparent swampbuster violations last year during six field visits in the Southeast and Midwest, but the farmers involved had not lost program benefits as a result.

"Implementation difficulties with swampbuster also have been created by varying interpretations on the part of USDA officials in granting exemptions allowed under the law and by delays in completing wetland inventories and determinations," Schnepf said. "Periodic changes in implementation rules and confusion among USDA employees and farmers over these rules also have contributed to the problems.

"Some producers do not support the swampbuster policy and are testing its intent and its implementation by USDA employees," Schnepf said, "especially in the Prairie Pothole region of the Dakotas and Minnesota."

The report says little about the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP), the other major provision in the 1985 farm bill. The CRP, which was studied closely by SWCS in 1989, the first year of the evaluation project, offers farmers an annual rental payment for idling highly erodible cropland and other fragile land for a 10-year period.

"The CRP is a popular program at most locations we've visited," Schnepf said. "Our main concern with its implementation now is the fact that a permanent, soil-conserving cover of grass or trees has not been established on some CRP acres. This is mainly because of drought.

"Weeds and insect pests are a problem on some CRP acres also," Schnepf said.

In commenting on the report, SWCS's Vrana said, "We concluded in our first project report released a year ago that the provisions of the 1985 farm bill held great promise for achieving important gains in soil erosion control and wetland protection on our nation's farms. We think that promise still exists, particularly with some of the refinements, such as graduated penalties, included in the 1990 Farm Bill, but it appears we may not realize as much of the promise as quickly as we had hoped."

The report released today by SWCS is the second from a three-year study funded mainly by The Joyce Foundation of Chicago, Ill. A final report will be issued later this year after completion of 14 additional field visits.

Nutrient Management Profitable

NEWARK, Del. — Managing crop nutrients is as much a matter of stewardship of the land as it is a matter of sound business practice.

"Plant nutrients applied to soils and not used by plants can be leached into groundwater or washed into surface waters with runoff," said Tom Williams, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension specialist in agricultural engineering and water quality. "This nutrient loss increases production costs and pollutes our water resources."

Williams said that following good nutrient management practices can save money while protecting water quality. He defines nutrient management as a combination of activities that maximizes fertilizer and nutrient use for increased farm profit, while minimizing water quality degradation.

- Knowing crop nutrient requirements.
- Setting realistic yield goals based on field history.
- Soil testing yearly for phosphorus, potassium, and lime needs.
- Analyzing manure for fertilizer value.
- Storing manure to minimize nutrient loss.
- Calibrating fertilizer application equipment and manure spreaders.
- Making timely applications of nutrients as close to plant uptake as possible.
- Incorporating manure and fertilizer into soil when feasible to reduce nutrient loss.
- Using a soil nitrate quick test to determine sidedress nitrogen needs.
- Crediting residual soil nitrogen contributions from previous crop and manure applications.
- Testing irrigation water for nitrate content and crediting to nitrogen requirements..
- Analyzing plant tissue for nutrient deficiencies.

Pennsylvania's 1990 Outstanding Tree Farmers

George and Joan Freeman from Knox in Clarion County are Pennsylvania's 1990 Outstanding Tree Farmers.

The Freemans began purchasing forest land in Clarion in 1957. By the late 1960s, they owned nearly 700 acres of land. From the beginning, George and Joan were interested in managing trees on their woodlands. Much of the land they purchased over the years had been cut over and was in need of intensive management. Old abandoned fields, excessive grapevines throughout the woodlot, and the need for timber stand improvement cuts were the challenges they faced.

And so the hard work began. They planted more than 44,000 tree species, including red pine, larch, spruce, white pine, and small quantities of hardwoods on the old fields to make them productive again.

They eradicated grapevines on 300 acres of the property. They removed culls and low-quality trees along with marketable timber. Three timber sales carried out with the help of John Chapman, Jr., a consulting forester, yielded 270,000 board feet of saw timber, 878 tons of pulpwood, and a financial reward for their work.

Through their efforts, the Freemans turned their woods into a highly productive Tree Farm. Their property has been a certified Tree Farm since 1975. With help and professional forestry advice from Dave Williams and Robert Merrill, both foresters with the Pennsylvania Bureau of Forestry, the Freeman's management plan is creating a healthy and productive forest for today and the future.

The Freeman's objective for their Tree Farm is described by the following quote from George Freeman: "Tree farming is more than developing a marketable timber stand. It is a love, a haven to develop dreams, a place to work, play, and relax. Many lessons are taught by one's experiences, especially patience, faith, respect and responsibility — qualities we apply to our everyday life. Your efforts, using good conservation practices, are rewarded by the beauty of nature."

— Scott Kurtzmann, The Glatfelter Pulp Wood Co., in "Pennsylvania's Tree Farm News," Sept. 1990.

Pennsylvania's Kitchen Cabinet Industry

As part of a continuing effort to obtain information on Pennsylvania's secondary wood products industries, this study determined the size, structure, material inputs used, and other characteristics of the kitchen cabinet industry. For many of Pennsylvania's forest products industries, national statistics are available but state-level data are lacking.

Information received from 55 percent of the estimated 239 companies active in the industry indicated the average firm annually produced 42,000 cabinets and had $5.1 million in sales. To obtain this level of production, the average firm employed 67 workers and used more than 497,000 board feet of lumber and 1 million square feet of panel stock.

In 1987, Pennsylvania's kitchen cabinet industry produced 7.2 million cabinets, had annual sales of $1.1 billion, employed 16,000 people, and used in excess of 83 million board feet of lumber and 222 million square feet of panel stock.

Approximately 34 million board feet of lumber was purchased from out-of-state suppliers. Principal species used were red oak (Quercus rubra), 38.8 percent; black cherry (Prunus serotina), 22.4 percent; yellow birch (Betula alleghaniensis), 10.3 percent; western white pine (Pinus monticola), 7.3 percent; white oak (Quercus alba), 4.6 percent; and both sugar maple (Acer saccharum) and yellow-poplar (Liriodendron tulipifera) at 3.7 percent. The remaining 9.4 percent consisted of hickory, ash, walnut, and various foreign species.

Other materials besides lumber and wood-based panels were used to produce, finish, and ship kitchen cabinets. Expenditures for hardware, finishing materials, packaging, and adhesives amounted to $82.1 million — 38.3 percent of this amount being purchased from out-of-state vendors.

Thirty-seven percent of the kitchen cabinet manufacturers reported the purchase of dimension materials with approximately one-third being purchased out-of-state. Over one-half of the dimension materials were purchased fully machined, 26 percent partially machined, 8 percent cut-to-size particleboard, 6 percent cut-to-size laminated particleboard, and 3 percent rough dimension.

This study indicated that Pennsylvania's kitchen cabinet industry has 38 percent more firms than is indicated by the United States Bureau of Census data and 10,000 more employees than reported in census information.

Resources

"Farming the Small Forest: A Guide for the Landowner" is a book for holders of 25 to 25,000 acres of timberland who depend on mills to buy and harvest their timber.

It is written for folks who need to understand forest management practices, silviculture, and government policies. The author, Laurence C. Walker, is a research and management forester who was dean of the School of Forestry at Stephen F. Austin University in Texas for 13 years.

The 176-page book is divided into five sections: silviculture, harvesting, administration, uses other than for wood, and stewardship, plus a glossary of forest terms and sentific names of trees mentioned in the text. Fore more information, call (800) 848-5594.

The "1991 Forest Farmer Manual" is an educational reference tool for timberland owners, foresters, consultants, loggers, and other individuals who are connected to forestry in the South in any way. The manual provides information on how to operate and profit in today's environmentally sensitive business climate. The manual is available for $20 plus $3 postage and handling from the Forest Farmers Association, Inc., P.O. Box 95385, Atlanta, GA 30347. The manual is free with Forest Farmers Association membership.

Grants For Local Tree Plantings Released

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania will receive $466,700 for new urban and community tree planting programs under a plan announced recently by Gov. Robert P. Casey at the Pennsylvania Nurserymen's Association's Arbor Day ceremony in Harrisburg.

The funding from the U.S. Forest Service is part of President Bush's America the Beautiful National Tree Planting Initiative and will be used to encourage communities to plant and maintain public trees.

The program includes hiring the state's first full-time urban forestry extension instructor at Penn State University and four regional urban forestry coordinators who will help communities develop tree planting projects and local shade tree ordinances.

The remaining funds will be distributed through challenge grants to be awarded to local governments and civic groups for the planting of trees along streets, in parks or greenbelts. Special grants also will be available to non-profit organizations to promote volunteer training for local urban forestry projects.

All grants will be awarded by a newly formed Urban and Community Forestry Council that includes representatives from the Pennsylvania Nurserymen's Association, Penn State University, Pennsylvania Electric Company, Metropolitan Edison, Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Pennsylvania Forestry Association, Root's Nurseries, Municipal Arborists, and the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources' Bureau of Forestry. The Council will announce a timetable for the 1991 grant awards later this summer.

Pennsylvania is one of six states in the northeast region to serve as a pilot program for the $16.6 million National Tree Planting Initiative. With a progressive urban forestry program already in place, the commonwealth received funding totaling more than three times the base amount awarded to other states.

In addition to the National Tree Planting Initiative, Pennsylvania currently administers the following urban forestry programs:

- Municipal Tree Restoration Program. A cooperative effort including utility companies, Penn State University, and the state Bureau of Forestry. Replaces trees growing under power lines with healthy and more desirable species.
- Penn ReLeaf. A cooperative effort including the Bureau of Forestry, Pennsylvania Nurserymen's Association, Morris Arboretum, Philadelphia Ranger Corps, Wildlands Conservancy, and the Pennsylvania Environmental Council. Conducts local workshops on urban forestry and offers community groups matching grants up to $50 for planting trees on public property.
- Pennsylvania Forestry Association, Urban Forestry Committee. Conducts local urban forestry workshops and recognizes outstanding individuals in the field each year.

For more information on Pennsylvania's urban forestry programs or the National Tree Planting Initiative, contact the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources, Bureau of Forestry, ATTN: America the Beautiful, P.O. Box 8552, Harrisburg, PA 17105-8552.

USDA Issues Payment Limitation Rules

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan recently announced that husbands and wives may qualify as separate persons under the Commodity Credit Corporation's payment-limitation rules if they do not receive payment from more than one source.

Madigan said the final rule also clarifies that an interest in an estate will not be considered another source.

These amendments form part of the final rules that govern the statutory payment-limitation and payment-eligibility provisions of the Food Security Act of 1985, as amended by the Food, Agriculture, Conservation and Trade Act of 1990. Agricultural producers receive payments for participating in programs that help adjust production and may add to the soundness of the environment.

Madigan said the new payment-limitation and payment-eligibility rules modify existing rules, affecting the following:

For the first time, the wool and mohair programs fall under payment limitation rules. In 1991, payments for each program are limited to $200,000 per person. In addition, each person must be "actively engaged in farming."

A new inheritance provision allows producers who inherit land subject to a Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) contract to earn payment without regard to any amount received under prior CRP contracts. For example, a producer who had reached the $50,000-payment limitation and who inherited land enrolled in the CRP could inherit another CRP contract and receive payments under the second contract in an amount up to $50,000.

In order for a trust to be considered "actively engaged in farming," the trust must have a valid tax identification number, unless the trust is revocable and the grantor is the sole income beneficiary. In this case, the grantor's tax identification number may be used.

Talks About Resuming Del. Seed Sales

DOVER, Del. — A delegation from Prince Edward Island, Canada's largest exporter of seed potatoes, recently visited Delaware to discuss the reopening of seed sales.

Prince Edward Island has been placed under strct quarantine as a result of the detection of PVy" in 1990, and the delegation will explain to state and industry officials the steps being taken to eradicate the virus.

The delegation is made up of both elected representatives and scientific officials. The elected representatives are Allison Ellis and Stavert Huestis, members of the Legislative Assembly. Both are also major potato producers. Scientific officials are from the provinical and federal departments of agriculture.

"Prince Edward Island is taking major steps to eradicate the virus," said Ellis. "The objective is complete eradication this year, in order to restore the Island's disease-free status."

Huestis said that the Delaware market is an important one for Prince Edward Island. "The ban on the export of seed sales to the U.S. has had a devastating effect on our industry," he said. "We want to explain what we are doing in order to get back into these markets".

Exports of seed sales to the U.S. were banned earlier this year by the U.S. Department of Agriculture because of the zero tolerance for PVy". PVy" is a virus disease which is harmless to human health, and has little if any effect on potatoes, but it is damaging to tobacco and some other crops such as peppers.

During the past several months, a comprehensive eradication program has been put in place.

Take Steps To Ensure Profitable Crop

NEWARK, Del. — A sound crop rotation is essential for ensuring good yields in soybeans, according to Derby Walker, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension county agent.

"If you feel you cannot rotate out of soybeans, then at least rotate to varieties that are resistant to nematode and soilborne diseases," he said.

The agent suggests that farmers who have experienced soybean severe stunt disease with their crops switch to an immune variety such as HT 5203. In addition, they can use a nematocide to control the dagger nematode that transmits this virus, which has been found in the Millsboro, Georgetown, and Harbeson, Del., areas.

Soybeans do well in soil with a pH level between 5.8 and 6.2. Walker said a manganese deficiency may be created on some loamy sand or sandy loam soils when pH exceeds 6.3. If a deficiency occurs, a manganese foliar fertilizer should be applied. When the deficiency is corrected early, little or no yield loss will occur.

Walker said that when the University of Delaware soil index results exceed 50 for phosphorus (P) or potassium (K), no fertilizer is necessary for that field.

row spacing	plants/ foot of row
36"	7.5
30"	6.5
20"	5.0
7"	2.0

The agent said soybeans planted 2 inches deep often do not make it out of the ground. Beans should be planted 1 to 1-1/2 inches deep.

"Weeds are an enemy of soybeans that must be dealt with," said Walker. "Incorporated soybean herbicides give excellent weed control because they are blended with the soil rather than left sitting on top. But take care not to incorporate too deeply, or you will dilute the herbicide."

Walker suggests using a field cultivator with rolling baskets. It should be set up with 2- to 2-1/2-inch teeth. Four-inch teeth are too wide and will result in non-uniform mixing. A second choice is to use a disk with 7-inch spacing.

"A disc with 9-inch spacing is too far apart to satisfactorily incorporate the herbicide," Walker said. "I hesitate to suggest this last option, but if you have no other choice but the 9-inch spacing, make two passes over the field, with the second pass at an angle to the first. You will have streaking and probably will not be satisfied with the results."

"Take the time to read the label before applying any herbicide," he said. "Any crop-rotation restrictions will be on this label. If vegetables are in your rotation, it is essential for you to plan not just one season in advance, but two, in some cases. These restrictions involve the use of old and new herbicides alike."

Animals Produce More Manure

Herbert C. Jordan
Associate Professor Of Poultry Science
Penn State University

Animals on farms in Pennsylvania normally produce more fresh manure and urine by weight than any other product. Therefore, animal farms are primarily in the manure business; and secondly, in the food production business.

The tonnage of fresh manure from poultry farms is normally greater than any other product. However, if manure is dried as it drops, fewer flies and less odor is produced.

Fresh manure is mostly water. Sixty-five to 95 percent of fresh poultry manure is normally water. Therefore, those who haul manure spend most of their time and money hauling water, not hauling dry matter manure.

The percent water in fresh manure is increasing on many farms. Percent water in fresh manure increases when animals have diarrhea, enteritic disorder, or if they drink too much water.

If birds spill water into fresh manure, it becomes too wet to be salable. Poultry manure from a healthy bowel can normally be dried as it drops by ambient air if ventilation is adequate. This drying can reduce the weight to haul to the field several fold.

Dry matter in fresh manure is 5 to 35 percent by weight. Dry matter in manure normally has more minerals, elements, or nutrients on a dry weight basis than the feed eaten on a dry weight basis. Therefore, we find dry matter manure normally concentrates elements 2 to 3 times as much as what is found in the feed.

When dry matter manure is used as fertilizer, it must be spread 1 to 2 ton dry matter per acre per year or less to prevent pollution.

It is important to test a manure spreader before you buy it. A manure spreader can be either a valuable asset or a machine to pollute soil, reduce crop yields, pollute well water on the farm, or cause other problems. It pays to buy and use manure spreaders wisely. Do not spread manure near a well on a watershed or near a spring.

Do not let flies and/or odor complaints mislead you. These problems can occur simultaneously with high moisture manure held in storage a long time.

To prevent manure problems, keep birds' bowel function normal; stop or divert water leaks; and dry manure as it drops. Spread manure fresh. Turn the manure into the top 3 to 6 inches of soil before sundown the same day it is spread.

Call your county agricultural agent if you need help.

You, Your Community And Water

Guy Temple
Union Co.
Extension Agent

What would you do if you have no water available at your home tomorrow morning? No shower, no brushing of teeth, no shaving, not even a cup of coffee to calm your concern?

Although water is essential for life, most of us take it for granted. We view water as an inexpensive and unlimited resource. We are satisfied as long as an unlimited supply of good quality water is available.

However, water supplies in this country are no longer unlimited. In many parts of the country, future water supplies are uncertain and growing water development costs have become an obstacle to expanding water supplies.

The severe lack of water in California is the present prime example. You are probably not concerned because it does not effect you. However, if it continues, it will definitely effect all of us in this country who eat — in my book that means a majority anyway. A lot of the fresh produce we all take for granted throughout the year comes from irrigated farms in California. Farms are being rationed this year and that will mean less fresh produce in the supermarket.

What are your local officials doing about future water supplies? Maybe you should ask your township or borough officials the next time you see them. They are ultimately responsible for a continuing supply of water for all of us, and there are some definite steps that can be taken to promote and insure conservation of water.

When the Municipal Planning Code was updated a few years ago, water-related articles were added. Article 3, Section 301, indicates that a comprehensive plan may include a plan for a reliable water supply. Article 5, Section 503.1, relating to subdivision and land development, indicates that every ordinance adopted shall include a provision, unless water is being supplied by private wells owned and maintained by the individual owner, indicating how and who will provide water to the development.

There are several reasons why we all should be conserving water. It will reduce impacts on our environment. Citizens and government are becoming sensitive to the negative impacts of new water development projects on the environment, when new dams for additional water are proposed. Water conservation programs could minimize or even avoid such impacts and also delay the need for the creation of "new" water supplies.

Reducing per capita water consumption will reduce the amount of sewage produced and increase the life and capacity of sewage treatment plants. Individual home owners on septic systems can also benefit from conserving water by reducing the hydraulic load on overloaded or improperly designed systems, thus postponing the need to incur extensive replacement costs.

Many communities have sewage treatment plants that are or are near to being overloaded. DER often imposes sewer hookup moratoriums on these communities. These moratoriums prevent additional housing construction activities from taking place, therefore effectively stopping growth. An overall reduction in water use would mean more homes could be built in a given area without adding sewage treatment plant capacity.

Another reason to conserve water is to lower overall government capital costs. Water systems include costly water treatment plants, pumping plants, reservoirs, and piping. Reduction in water use would delay the enlargement of these facilities.

Energy savings can also be substantial for both those on community water systems and those who have on-lot wells. Most water supplies use energy for pumping. In addition, most homeowners use more energy to heat the water. Saving water will save energy, which in turn will save money on water heating bills as well as on municipal costs.

The major reasons leading to community water conservation programs are drought, major water shortages because of pollution of an aquifer, rapid growth in an area, equipment failure, and sewer hookup moratoriums.

The new role envisioned for water conservation programs is an an integral part of long-term resource planning during non-crisis situations. From this perspective, water conservation might be more appropriately termed "water demand management" in contrast to our present "water supply management." This strategy envisions conservation programs as a means of reducing demand versus a traditional water resource program which seeks to supply all the water the public wants.

Public officials at all levels of government are becoming convinced of the importance of community-level water conservation programs to reduce the demand on the nation's water resources. Various strategies can be used as part of a community water conservation program. These include:

- Public consumer education programs indicating the rationale behind proposed actions and monetary benefits to the consumer.
- Initiate a program of waier conservation in all public facilities such as schools, colleges, hospitals, prisons, and municipal buildings, including a leak detection program, and metering and refitting of public buildings with water saving devices in older plumbing fixtures.
- Pass ordinances regulating outdoor water use and encourage water efficient landscaping.
- Plan workshops for plumbers, builders, hardware owners, and others on the need for water saving equipment.
- Amend building codes to require water saving equipment in new construction.
- Look at water rates structure revisions.
- Identify high water users in the commercial and industrial sector and approach them with specific water conservation plans for their facilities. These facilities could be hotels, motels, restaurants, car washes, and industrial plants.
- Plan a community wide refitting program to encourage water-saving devices, including toilet displacement bottles, flow control aerators, shower flow controls, etc.

All of the above information is detailed in a Penn State University bulletin, "A Guide to Designing A Community Water Conservation Program." Water conservation strategies, sources of watar information, and sources of water conservation equipment are all discussed.

The guide should be of interest and value to water utilities, planners, environmental and citizens organizations, and individuals concerned with increasing the efficiency of our water systems.

Unconventional Products Don't Control Rootworm

Robert J. Anderson
Lancaster Co.
Extension Agent

Have you heard of anyone using some strange products for the control of rootworm larvae on corn and wondered how they worked?

Iowa State University and several other universities in the Midwest have been evaluating some of these unconventional products for several years. I would like to share a summary of their findings.

The odd products evaluated included soybean meal, sulfur, sugar, turpentine, dry molasses, and a mixture of kelp, fish meal, and diatomaceous earth.

The Iowa 1-6 root rating scale was used to evaluate the performance of these products. This is the nationally accepted rating system for evaluation of root damage due to insect feeding. In the rating system, roots are visually examined for rootworm feeding damage. A rating of 1 has very little or no feeding damage while a rating of 6 has severe feeding damage. In fact a rating of 6 has very few roots. The important number to remember in the system is that any rating over 3 will result in yield losses.

Here's how Iowa State Researcher, Dr. M. E. Rice summarized the studies.

"The use of alternative, or unconventional, products to protect corn roots from insect damage continues to attract the attention of Iowa farmers," said Rice. "The fascination behind the use of these unconventional products (I hate to call them insecticides because as you will see, they don't control insects) apparently is that they are safer for the farmer to handle and are less detrimental to the environment."

Dr. Rice doesn't mention it but I would guess they are also much cheaper to use. According to Rice, farmer testimonial has been widely used during the last couple of years to promote the use of these products.

In Minnesota, a conventional insecticide was compared to sulfur and to sugar and a check treatment at several locations.

TREATMENT	FOOT FEEDING RATING
Conventional Insecticide	2.18
Check	3.25
Sulfur	3.22
Sugar	3.33

Only the conventional insecticide product had a root rating below 3. The sulfur and sugar treatments had ratings which were statistically the same as the check.

Iowa compared several insecticides with soybean meal.

TREATMENT	FOOT FEEDING RATING
Conventional Insecticides	2.71
Check	4.52
Soybean Meal	4.83

Again only the conventional insecticides showed any control.

In Wisconsin, several insecticides were compared to turpentine, molasses, sulfur, and a mixture of kelp, fishmeal, and diatomaceous earth.

TREATMENT	FOOT FEEDING RATING
Conventional Insecticide	2.29
Molasses	3.35
Turpentine	3.70
Check	3.95
Sulfur	4.30
Sea Food Combo	4.35

All of the studies results strongly suggest that none of the unconventional treatments are effective in the control of rootworm larvae.

If your corn field has a problem, don't count on any of these treatments.

ASA Plans Video Auctions

BOZEMAN, Mont. — The American Simmental Association (ASA), working in conjunction with Satellite Cattle Exchange (SCE), Ltd., has scheduled two upcoming video auctions of Simmental and Simbrah-influenced feeder cattle.

The two sales are scheduled for August 15 and again on October 3.

"The association believes that the opportunities for video marketing Simmental and Simbrah cattle are unlimited," said ASA Executive Vice President Brian Kitchen. 'It means that the calves never leave the ranch until they're ready for delivery to a known buyer at a known price!"

In 1990, an estimated 1.5 to 2 million head of cattle were sold through video auction, and the number is expected to rise as cattle buyers and sellers realize the advantages.

SCE has more than 120 representatives nationwide to handle consignments of cattle for upcoming sales. Once a cattleman agrees to sell his cattle through SCE, a videotape of the cattle is made, and a representative writes a detailed description of the cattle to be published in a sale catalog.

On sale day, a master tape of all consigned cattle is broadcast via satellite across the U.S. and can be viewed by those attending central bidding stations or by owners of satellite dishes. Bidding from home is done by telephone.

Interested Simmental and Simbrah breeders may obtain additional information by calling Tom White at ASA (800) 548- 0205 or Danny Burns at SCE (800) 543-5905.

USDA Scientists Amplify Genetic Secrets To Detect Animal Diseases

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Amplify a radio wave and inaudible signals become sounds, such as music or speech. In the same way, a new technology based on a polymerase chain reaction (PCR) is amplifying hidden genetic information to reveal animal diseases that have been difficult to detect.

Since the discovery of PCR in 1985, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) has been putting the PCR technique to practical use in the laboratory. APHIS also is involved in licensing commercial production of the diagnostic kits that make use of the process.

"Disease organisms may be present in an animal at a very low level, especially in the early stages of infection," said David Espeseth, who heads the licensing division in APHIS. "Detecting these organisms can be like hunting for a certain piece of a jigsaw puzzle. PCR technology provides a way to amplify the target piece exactly, many times over, so that the chances of finding it are greatly increased."

The technology relies on looking closely into the organism's DNA — its genetic blueprint. Since each blueprint is unique, it reliably reveals the identity of its owner.

"PCR doesn't amplify the entire DNA complement. It focuses on one unique, detectable sequence," Espeseth said. "It's like duplicating just the needed edge of the target puzzle piece. This is speedier and more efficient than old propagation methods that replicated an entire organism."

Once scientists identify the unique sequence that will reliably indicate the presence of the disease organism, they synthesize a complementary DNA sequence called a DNA probe. If the disease organism is present in a test sample, the targeted sequence will pair with the DNA probe. A color change or radioactive glow built into the DNA probe confirms the disease.

"DNA probes have been used for some years and are extremely accurate," said Espeseth. "The pairing never happens if the disease isn't present. Without amplification, however, DNA probes aren't very sensitive. Amplifying the DNA with PCR techniques produces a very specific and very sensitive test for the presence of animal disease organisms."

Espeseth's group recently licensed the first PCR-based diagnostic test kit, which is now commercially available. It identifies the bacteria responsible for paratuberculosis (or Johne's disease), which is a chronic, contagious, incurable disease of ruminants. The PCR-based test takes 24 hours — much less than the existing test, which depends on bacterial cultures and takes about 10 to 12 weeks.

In the future, PCR tests also promise to support the fight against pseudorabies, a contagious viral disease of swine that spurred American pork producers to call for a nationwide eradication program that began in 1989. Developmental work on PCR is being conducted at the National Veterinary Services Laboratories (NVSL) in Ames, Iowa.

"Pseudorabies can be carried by an apparently healthy pig, which may suddenly begin to shed the virus, infecting others in the herd," said Jon Katz, who heads a team of APHIS microbiologists at NVSL. "Available diagnostic tests scan for antibodies or infectious viruses but may miss latent infections that will be caught by PCR techniques. The gain in accuracy could help the swine industry rid itself of the disease more quickly."

At its current stage of development, the PCR technique for pseudorabies testing has a major drawback. It requires brain tissue, which necessitates sacrificing the test animal. Katz said his team is working on an adaptation that would use tonsil tissue instead.

PCR technology also is being adapted for detecting foot-and-mouth disease, one of the world's most destructive illnesses of livestock. This highly contagious viral disease has been successfully kept out of the United States for the last several decades. If the disease ever bypassed APHIS inspectors at the border and started infecting U.S. livestock, APHIS would take prompt countermeasures — the success of which would depend on early, accurate detection of the virus.

Richard Meyer is an APHIS microbiologist at Plum Island Foreign Animal Disease Diagnostic Laboratory, located offshore near Orient, N.Y., with highly secure facilities that make it safe to work with exotic disease organisms. Meyer and his coworkers have developed a PCR test for foot-and-mouth disease that can confirm or deny the presence of the disease in a fraction of the usual time. The PCR procedure can be accomplished in a plastic tube, while the confirmatory diagnostic procedure requires sacrificing a live animal.

Despite the promise of PCR procedures, laboratory workers aren't about to throw away their traditional test tubes and culture plates. Even in situations where PCR procedures are practical, they require sophisticated training and equipment, which results in increased operating costs. However, at times, the procedures already offer immediate savings, as in the case of foot-and-mouth disease tests where a plastic tube can replace a cow.

"The scientific community is excited by the potential of PCR techniques," Espeseth said. "We are finding applications in all fields of medical technology where DNA identifications can furnish crucial evidence."

Md. Ag Still Going Strong

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Wayne A. Cawley, Jr. has announced that since Governor William Donald Schaefer's trade mission to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union last spring, his department, along with the University of Maryland, has continued to build strong ties with these countries.

"In Poland, Hungary, Romania, and the Soviet Union, we have increased our contacts and exchanges. Our follow-up from the Governor's trip has been fantastic," Cawley said.

"In January, my department and the university hosted the governor and a delegation from Poznan, Poland. An immediate result of their visit is a serious effort by a Maryland poultry processor to further explore a joint venture in the poultry area," said Cawley.

"In Hungary, we are working with an American businessman on developing a 6,000-acre farm. The University of Maryland System sent three experts to Hungary at the expense of the Hungarians to help on the project. The potential is unlimited," Cawley said.

Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Robert L. Walker met with the Romanian Ambassador in Washington. As a result, the Minister of Agriculture from Romania invited two of the department's animal health experts to visit Romania at the expense of the Romanian government. The trip took place last fall and laid the groundwork for future business contacts.

The department's most extensive contacts have been with various Soviet organizations. Maryland farmers hosted 10 students this past summer from the Timiryazev Agricultural Academy and the Moscow Institute of Agricultural Engineers.

Understand Host/Pest Triangle To Manage Crops

DEKALB, Ill. — Insects and disease are problems that always nag corn growers and cause yield and profit loss. But farmers can better manage this problem by understanding the host/pest triangle.

"This term refers to the conditions necessary for a disease or insect problem to fully develop," said Larry Martin, regional agronomist for DEKALB Plant Genetics. "These involve a susceptible plant, a causal agent such as a fungus or virus, and a favorable environment."

Martin said that all three conditions must be met for crop damage to occur. Even then, timing plays a big role in actual problem development.

The DEKALB agronomist also said that understanding the triangle makes it easier for growers to defuse yield-threatening agents such as insects and disease.

He said susceptibility depends on the genetic constitution of plants, their stage of development, and their overall health and vigor.

In addition, plants that are well fed and watered, vigorous and well managed will fare better against pest attacks. Soil fertility and pH, drainage and moisture condition also can indirectly affect pest development, said Martin.

Presence of causal agents depends on previous crops, nearby vegetation, wind and air movement, activity of insect vectors or carriers and geographic location, he said.

"Seed treatment with fungicides helps control soil-borne fungi that attack germinating seed," Martin said. "Crop rotations help break the build up of several corn pests, and elimination of residue may be helpful, too. Also, control of insects in nearby vegetation prevents buildup and spill over into corn fields."

Martin said that environmental conditions such as rainfall, temperature, humidity, and light levels all affect initiation and continuation of pest development.

Corn Growers Look At Good Things In Small Packages

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — Bigger might be better in basketball and body building, but when it comes to selecting hybrid seed corn, kernel size has little, if any, effect on performance.

Provided corn growers maintain and adjust planters accordingly, research trials have consistently indicated there is no significant difference in performance between small-sized seed corn and larger-sized seed of an identical hybrid. While all corn plants produce some seed that fit any one of eight different size and shape categories, unusual growing conditions last season presented the U.S. seed industry with higher-than-normal supplies of small corn seed this season. Because small seed often is priced 5 to 10 percent below its average-sized counterparts, this presents growers with an economic advantage for the upcoming season.

"Seed corn size is controlled initially by genetics, but subsequently by environmental conditions," said William Reiss, Ph.D., technical services agronomist, Asgrow Seed Company. "The combination of heavy corn borer infestations and high incidence of stalk and leaf diseases last season stressed corn plants during 1990. The result is a larger-then-normal amount of small-sized corn seed available industry wide this season."

Reiss said, "A corn grower's primary concern in buying seed corn should be superior genetics and high physiological quality. After that, it's important to keep seedlot size uniform, and have the planter properly maintained and adjusted to handle the specific kernel size being planted."

In an effort to ensure top results with Asgrow hybrids, the company conducted plantability studies in cooperation with Case IH and John Deere. Results of these tests indicate that modern corn planters have the capability to plant any kernel size with the accuracy that the farmer expects.

In a related study with John Deere 7000 series planters, the effect of planter condition and speed demonstrated the necessity to keep corn planters in top working condition. As long as normal planter maintenance is conducted and speed monitored, kernel size will have little effect on stand density, regardless of the planter used. Tests have shown seed from any of Asgrow's eight kernel size categories with similar germination levels will produce similar grain yields when grown under the same environmental conditions.

Plant 3 Maturities, Spread Risk

DEKALB, Ill. — Farmers who plant corn hybrids of differing maturity have a greater chance of a profitable harvest.

DEKALB Plant Genetics regional agronomist Jim Schwartz said planting three maturities makes good agronomic sense and helps corn growers spread production risks.

"If you spread out your hybrid maturities, you spread risks from such factors as insects, diseases, and different weather patterns over the course of a year," he said.

He advises growers to plant the best available hybrid in each maturity group. They should select high-yielding, strong-standing hybrids that will be as dry as practical at harvest.

Schwartz advises growers to plant early, medium, and full-season hybrids. A 25-50-25 ratio of these maturities can help growers maximize yields and reduce risks.

"Planting 50 to 60 percent of your corn acreage in the mid-season range helps reduce the risk from frost and maximizes the total amount of heat units," he said. 'Plant another 20-25 percent in the full-season range to get total utilization of sunlight and heat units."

Schwartz suggests planting another 20-25 percent in the short-season range. Growers who sell grain at harvest may want to plant more of this maturity because of moisture discounts.

"By planting a mixture of maturities, you spread and level out the harvest and grain handling load, too," said Schwartz. "You spread use of harvesting equipment over a longer period of time and over more total acres."

He said that costly field losses can be better controlled because more corn can be harvested at its optimum stage.

"Maturity management plus early planting will help growers spread risk and stabilize corn profits over the years," Schwartz said.

Md. Simmental Sale Held

Seven bulls were sold at an average of $1,132, 11 open heifers averaged $686 and 12 cow/calf pairs were sold for an average of $1,238.

The high selling cow was consigned by G & J Valley Farm, Spring Grove, and sold for $1,750. The high selling bull was HF Charlie, consigned by Hargett Farms, Boyds, Md. and brought $1,500.

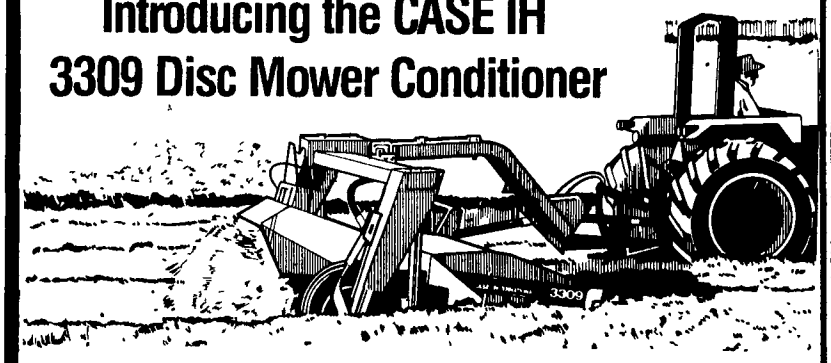
Introducing the CASE IH 3309 Disc Mower Conditioner



Whether your hay crops are nearly ideal or difficult cutting conditions are the norm, the CASE International 3309 Disc Mower Conditioner delivers fast cutting with less plugging Seven oval discs spinning at 3 000 RPM — with two free-swinging, reversible knives apiece — slice through tangled grass hay or legumes easily and efficiently, with a cut that's 9 ft 3 in (2 82 m) wide The patented roll separation lets you clear out slugs without leaving the tractor seat, and the adjustable header tilt and hydraulic tongue positioning offer extra operator convenience And you ll find many more features to help you match crop conditions A direct-drive gearbox and modular cutterbar assure reduced maintenance and provide for ease of servicing For virtually nonstop cutting when the going gets tough, get going — and keep going — with a CASE International 3309 See it today

★ The Patented Roll Separation Lets You Clean Out Slugs Without Leaving The Tractor Seat!

Service and maintenance were equally well planned for on the 3309. A constatn-velocity PTO allows smooth, quiet turns, as well as less wear on bearings and drivelines. In addition, you'll find a single direct-drive gear box that drives all the working components on the machine, including both conditioner rolls and the cutterbar. Each knife is reversible, with two cutting edges for extended usage. Finally, the shaft-driven cutterbar is built with modular components for easy repair and reduced maintenance. Instead of disassembling the entire bar, you can simply remove the appropriate disc module, make the needed repairs, and you're back in the field

With Case IH You Have Grease Lubrication - NOT Oil Bath With Seals To Give-Out Like The Competition Offers... Also, With Individualized Case IH Components You Need Not Worry When Working On Slopes On Account Of Oil Lube Running To End Of Cutter Bar & Running Dry On Other End.

New! Precision Metering For Soybeans, Milo.

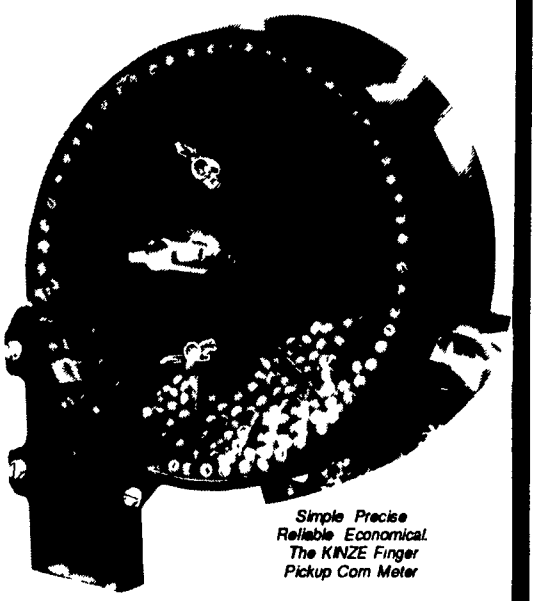
Imagine nearly perfect plateless metering for soybeans, milo/grain sorghum! Imagine the ability to plant varying seed sizes accurately — soybeans (from 2,200 to 4,000 seeds per pound); milo/grain sorghum (12,000-18,000 seeds per pound); — with the same meter and the appropriate seed disc. A precision meter with one moving part. One that costs little to maintain. One that eliminates the wasted overage and all the extra adjustments of conventional mechanical metering systems. One that doesn't require all the pumps, adjustments and maintenance of air and vacuum systems. One that's actually gentler on the seed than anything you've used before.

Meet the new KINZE® Brush-Type Seed Meter. Designed specifically to handle a wide variety of crops.

How does it work? Simply! It consists of a die-cast aluminum housing and a system of brushes that fills and gently retains individual seeds in a precision-molded seed disc with specially designed seed pockets.

As the disc rotates vertically within the housing, seeds gravitate toward the pedrimeter of the seed disc. Individual seeds are then picked up by the molded seed pocket and retained by the special brush system until they reach a point immediately above the seed tube where they are released and allowed to drop gently into the seed trench.

The result? More accuracy and control than you ever thought possible. Without all the adjustments. Without all the maintenance headaches.



Simple Precise Reliable Economical. The KINZE Finger Pickup Corn Meter

The industry's BEST warranties.

✓ 7 Years Unlimited Hours on T-L's Guidance Valve.

Select T-L Planetary Gear Drive and get 6 Years or 10,000 Hours Protection.

OR

Choose T-L Worm Gear Drive and get 5 Years or 7,000 Hours Warranty.

T-L's worm gear drive warranty is the longest in the industry. . . on top of that, you get continuous movement . . . made famous by T-L hydrostatic drive.

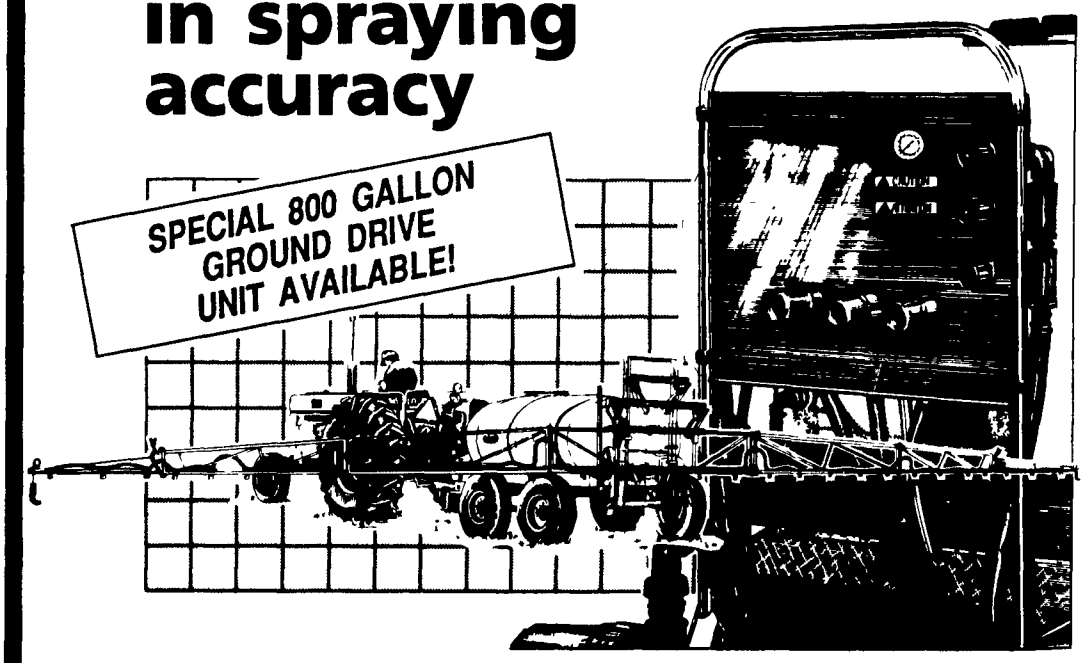
Breakthrough in spraying accuracy



Wasting chemical and yield on hills and headlands is a thing of the past with Vicon's new flow proportioning and boom compensation system. Application rate remains constant even when ground speed varies or individual boom sections are shut off. That means better coverage with lower input costs.

It is available on all Vicon trailer sprayers with tank capacities up to 785 U.S. gal. (3000 litres) and automatic stabilizing booms from 28' to 62'. There's also a choice of hydraulic or manual folding booms and a range of accessories that make crop spraying less of a chore.

"MAKING GOOD SILAGE"

Probably no other ingredient fed in cattle rations today varies so much in "quality" as silage. It takes common sense, attention to details, and solid management to make good silage.

At least nine factors affect silage quality. Rather than acting independently, they interact to determine silage quality:

"The 9 Factors"
1. The Crop
2. Stage of Growth
3. Moisture
4. Fine Chopping
5. Filling, Packing and Sealing
6. Silo Structures
7. Feedout
8. Weather
9. Additives

Since 1908, SOLLENBERGER SILOS CORP. has been providing the Silo Structures now in demand by more and more farmers concerned about "silage quality." "Nothing keeps feed better than our poured concrete silos."

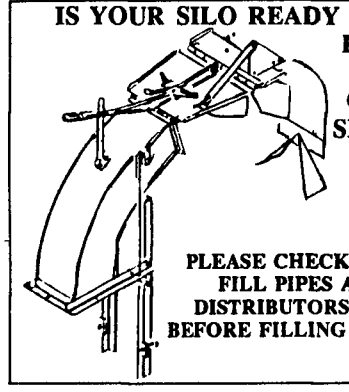
S & S Silo Service Has 10 Years Experience With Shotcrete Relining

IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH GRASS SILAGE?



PLEASE CHECK YOUR FILL PIPES AND DISTRIBUTORS NOW BEFORE FILLING SEASON

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

- Large Tri-Suspension frame provides proper balance for even silage cutting.
- 2"x2"x¼" angled steel frame has greater strength
- Forged ½" steel eye-bolts allow for individual cable adjustment and proper balance.
- Three, strong, ¼" aircraft-type cables provide high-tensile strength and dependability.

- Auger knives are sharpened, hardened and curved. Result: augers and chipper wheels maintain proper wall pressure for better cleaning and more aggressive cutting and digging of hard-packed or frozen silage.
